3 More Area Auto Firms Must Explain Operations

30 Are Expected To Testify at 'Hill' Probe of Agencies' Trade Practices

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Operations of three Washington area automobile agencies will be the subject of Congressional hearings starting Monday.

They boost to five the number of metropolitan auto firms on which the attention of the House subcommittee investigating questionable trade practices has been centered this month.

The firms whose officials have been called to appear in Monday's hearing are:

Ourisman Chevrolet, Inc., 610 H st. ne.; Mandell Chevrolet Co., Inc., 1800 Nichols ave. se., and Kenyon-Peck, Inc., 2825 Wilson blvd., Arlington, Va., which also deals in Chevrolets.

To Hear 30 Witnesses

Some 30 witnesses are expected to testify, including representatives of the three firms, automobile purchasers, and officials of the Chevrolet Division of General Motors Corp.

Subcommittee Counsel John T. M. Reddan said that the hearings would emphasize three phases of automobile sales and distribution policies here:

1. The handling of dealers' lists of prospective buyers.
2. Policies on trade-ins.
3. Policies on sales of accessories.

The second and third points played a major part in last week's Capitol Hill auto hearings before the same subcommittee, headed by Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.).

In its probe of the Kearney Oldsmobile Co. here, the subcommittee brought out that large, quick profits were made on tradeins by selling them to other dealers. The firm's Oldsmobile franchise was later withdrawn.

In its investigation of the New York Avenue Motor Co., Hudson distributor here, the subcommittee emphasized policies on sale of accessories.

Hudson Alters Policy

The inquiry was followed by an announcement of the Hudson Motor Co., that starting about January 1, half of its "Super" series would be shipped with no "extras" except bumper guards, heaters, and in some areas, oil bath air filters.

Through an official of the Kenyon-Peck firm, its president, Robert A. Peck, declined comment on the announcement that his firm would be a subject of the Monday hearings. The official said that Peck had been ill for some time, and that he is still under a doctor's care.

At the Ourisman firm, Edwin Frech, assistant treasurer and office manager, referred inquiries to Benjamin Ourisman, president of the firm. The latter could not be reached for comment last night.

Mandell J. Ourisman, vice president of the Ourisman firm, was said to be out of town. He is a son of Benjamin Ourisman.

At the Mandell firm, Harry Rosenthal, vice president and general manager, said he did not know a thing about the hearings, and would not discuss the policy questions to be reviewed there.

The hearing will begin at 10 a. m. Monday. Reddan said it may continue through two days. It will be held in Room 1302 of the new House Office Building.

Seaplane, Ferry Collide In Delaware River

Philadelphia, Nov. 26 (AP). — A seaplane and a ferryboat collided in the Delaware River today.

The small seaplane was taxiing to its base. The ferryboat, the Haddonfield, was carrying a small number of passengers from Camden to Philadelphia. No one was hurt.

Truman, Foley Seek Way to Get Action On Cheaper Homes

By The Associated Press

President Truman and the Government housing chief yesterday talked over plans to get more roofs over American heads as quickly and cheaply as possible.

Housing Administrator Raymond M. Foley said after the White House conference that they had discussed ways to get quick aid from both Congress and private industry to boost production and cut prices.

Later, the Government's housing and home finance agency said it was making progress in a plan to standardize building codes and materials.

This plan, Foley explained, is to help private industry by making available to it technical knowhow worked up through Government research.

Drafting 4-Point Plan

Foley's talk with Mr. Truman yesterday centered around a four-point program which is to be offered to Congress probably in January 30.

The main points are:

1. Federal aid for low-rent housing projects for low-income families.
2. Federal loans and grants for slum clearance.
3. Federal aid to farmers for rural homes and repairs.
4. Federal sponsorship of a long-range housing research program to help private industry.

Foley said that in addition to the legislative program, the Government will make a Nation-wide effort to win cooperation of builders, lenders, labor and other interested groups to stimulate more home construction at lower costs and rents.

The housing legislation being planned is similar to the twice-beaten Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, named for Senators Taft (R., Ohio), Ellender (D., La.) and Wagner (D., N. Y.).

Ellender to Act Promptly

Ellender has announced he will revive such a bill as soon as Congress meets.

The Government's standardization program depends on cooperation among technicians of private industry, contractors, builders and even universities, Foley said.

One specific problem already attacked is the uniform plumbing code.

De Gaulle's Demands Caused Eisenhower to Modify Plans For Safety of Strasbourg

North of the break-through three Allied armies and part of another occupied a great salient, extending in a rough semicircle over 250 miles of front. In the extreme north was the Twenty-first Army Group, facing northward and eastward along the lower Rhine and the Maas River. Next to the south was the U. S. Ninth Army, facing east. Next in line was that part of the U. S. First Army, now facing southward, which remained north of the penetration.

All the troops that could be spared from the First and Ninth Army fronts were being assembled to build up an eastwest defensive line against the German assault. These two armies could, at that moment, provide no mobile reserve whatsoever.

There was, however, an available reserve in Montgomery's Twenty-first Army Group. It was the British 30th Corps, then out of the line and available for duty anywhere on our great semicular line in the north, any part of which might be attacked by the enemy.

The depth of the German advances on the eighteenth and nineteenth had broken all normal communications between Bradley's headquarters at Luxembourg and the headquarters of the Ninth and First Armies. For this reason it was completely impossible for Bradley to give to the attack on the southern shoulder the attention that I desired and at the same time keep properly in touch with the troops in the north who were called upon to meet the heaviest German blows.

To this whole situation only one solution seemed applicable. This was to place all troops in our northern salient under one commander. The only way of achieving the necessary unity was to place Montgomery temporarily in command of all the northern forces and direct Bradley to give his full attention to affairs on the south.

Churchill Assures British Support

Late that evening Mr. Churchill telephoned to ask how the battle was going. I gave him the outline of the countermeasures already directed and informed him of the temporary command setup. He remarked that my plan would make the British reserve instantly available for use wherever needed regardless of previously defined zones, and said, "I assure you that British troops will always deem it an honor to enter the same battle as their American friends."

The command plan worked and there was generally universal acceptance of its necessity at the time.

Unfortunately, after the battle was over a press conference held by Montgomery, supplemented by a number of press stories written by reporters attached to the Twenty-first Army Group, created the unfortunate impression among Americans that Montgomery was claiming he had moved in as the savior of the Americans. I do not believe that Montgomery meant his words as they sounded, but the mischief was not lessened thereby.

This incident caused me more distress and worry than did any similar one of the war. I doubt that Montgomery ever came to realize how deeply resentful some American commanders were. They believed that he had deliberately belittled them—and they were not slow to voice reciprocal scorn and contempt. It was a pity that such an incident had to mar the universal satisfaction in final success.

Tito Blames Upset In Program on Cominform Units

Belgrade, Nov. 26 (NYHT).—Marshal Tito has announced that Yugoslavia must abandon temporarily the most ambitious phases of its five-year reconstruction plan and blamed it on the curtailment of economic help from Cominform countries.

He told the closing session of the congress of the Communist Party of Croatia in Zagreb that in the coming year "we must confine ourselves to what is most important" in carrying on the reconstruction program. He indicated that under present circumstances the Yugoslav economy is not capable of carrying out any but essential building of new capital installations and improvement of old ones.

He assailed the "insignificant minority" of Yugoslav Communists who sided with the Cominform and "took it into their heads that they are Marxist ideologists." He said they tried to turn the Yugoslav Communist Party "into a sort of discussion club."

U. N. Completes Draft of World Bill of Rights

Covenant to Force Observance by Nations Will Be Drawn Next

Paris, Nov. 26 (AP).—A world bill of rights, proclaiming freedom and equality for everyone, approached its final form today.

Delegates of the 58 United Nations completed the last of 28 draft articles of a declaration of human rights.

Only the preamble and a possible new article or two remain to be acted on before the historic document moves from the 58-nation social committee to the General Assembly for final approval here this year.

The declaration has been in preparation more than two years. It is estimated 700 hours of debate developed in the drafting stage. Some of the bitterest ideological clashes in U. N. history accompanied its formation.

The declaration combines principles of the constitutions of Soviet Russia, the United States, England and France. Civilizations and cultures of the Orient and the West find expression in the lists of rights.

It is hailed by U. N. officials as "one of the great landmarks of civilization," though it will have only moral authority, at least at first.

A human rights covenant, legally binding all signatory nations, is to be drawn up before next year's U. N. Assembly. Under its provisions, all signatory nations would agree to imposition of sanctions in case of violation of the rights.

Authors believe this international machinery may remove one of the principal causes of war: tyranny and oppression against individual rights and freedoms.

The declaration calls for an end to discrimination based on "race, color, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, property or other status, birth or national or other opinions."

It would prohibit slavery and the slave trade and ban torture.

Bid to Chiang To Visit U. S. Is Withheld

Truman Rejects Bloom Suggestion; Wife Will Come To Discuss Plight

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday turned down a suggestion that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek be invited to Washington.

The suggestion was made by Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.), prospective chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, who, during a White House visit, said that what is needed here is "real information about the Chinese situation."

Bloom told reporters that Mr. Truman "didn't see how Chiang could leave China at this time."

At about the same time yesterday, the State Department confirmed reports that Mme. Chiang Kai-shek was planning a visit to the United States.

Michael J. McDermott, department press officer, was not able to say when she is coming or under what auspices.

In Nanking, it was stated that the 50-year-old Mme. Chiang was invited by "certain American organizations." These were not identified. It was assumed that she would come to Washington to ask for "more and quicker help" for her hard-pressed country.

That was the theme of a broadcast she made from Nanking on Sunday. She said that "requests" had been coming in from many quarters that she visit the United States and speak on the situation in China. She added that "since my country is engaged in a life-and-death struggle against communism, much as I would like to be with you, I cannot leave just now."

Representative Bloom, apprised of Mme. Chiang's later decision to come here, said she should be asked to testify on Capitol Hill.

"Mme. Chiang could give us the necessary information for formulation of an adequate and foolproof aid program for China," he said. "She is well known for her frankness and her grasp of affairs. I believe she could answer our questions candidly and with authority."

Bloom thought it might be a good idea to have Mme. Chiang testify at an informal joint session of the Senate and House Committees that deal with foreign affairs and appropriations.

At any rate, he was confident that she could supply more real information than William C. Bullitt, former American Ambassador to Moscow. Bullitt is now in China making a survey for the Joint Congressional Watchdog Committee on Foreign Aid. He was chosen for his role by the Republican leaders of the committee in advance of the November 2 election.

Pentagon Salute At Retreat Stopped As Traffic Hazard

Don't look scandalized if you should see members of the Army, Navy and Air Force at the Pentagon ignoring sunset ceremonies at nearby Fort Myer hereafter.

Since the huge building across the river was built, the homeward rush of officers, men and civilians has paused briefly when retreat was sounded just across the road. Those in uniform snapped to attention and men in civies doffed their hats as the flag came down.

Mimeographed directions from Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, commander of the military district of Washington, yesterday described the practice as a "serious traffic hazard" and called upon Pentagon personnel to no longer "participate in retreat ceremonies heard from nearby installations."

Barkley Likely To Spur Rights Law by Ruling

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A new set of teeth for the Senate's nearly defunct cloture rule, opening the way for passage of at least part of the President's civil rights program, became a distinct probability yesterday.

Administration proponents of civil rights legislation, exploring means of enacting the program, disclosed that a simple ruling from the Senate chair may clear the way.

The ruling, shortening the life-span of future filibusters, would be up to the Senate's new presiding officer—Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley—a civil rights advocate.

All Barkley needs to do, some of his colleagues said, is reverse an earlier ruling by his predecessor in the chair, Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), with whom Barkley took issue at the time.

Vandenberg ruled on August 2, 1948, that cloture procedure (shutting off filibusters), cannot be used to stop debate on a motion to call up a bill.

As a result of the ruling, which Vandenberg said was in line with his unbiased "best judgment and honest reflection of what the Senate rules require," Southern Senators won their last filibuster against antipoll tax legislation.

Vandenberg went further and found that "the Senate has no effective cloture rule at all."

Barkley, however, took a diametrically opposite stand in debate leading up to the ruling. The Kentucky Democrat, who, starting January 20, will have the power to

ECA Spending Speedup Gets Truman Nod

Approves Hoffman's Plan to Use All of 4.05 Billions by April 12

President Truman yesterday approved recommendations of Paul G. Hoffman to spend all of the $4,055,000,000 appropriated for European recovery by April 12.

Congress had intended the funds to last for 15 months, or until June 30, 1949, but it provided that the President could authorize their expenditure during a 12-month period if he considered it necessary to speed up the recovery program.

His action clears the way for Hoffman to ask the new Congress for a deficiency appropriation covering the April-June period. The ECA chief has indicated he is thinking in terms of another $1,250,000,000.

Hoffman outlined his views in a letter to Mr. Truman on October 29 and again in a personal White House interview last week.

Mr. Truman, in a letter in reply, said he agreed that the "pressing needs" faced by participating nations in western Europe justified the spending in 12 rather than 15 months.

Italians Drop 'Cognac'; It Will Be 'Arzente'

Rome, Nov. 26 (AP).—The name of cognac will no longer be taken in vain in Italy.

This decision is among the results of America's Economic Recovery Program for Europe.

Italy and France were encouraged to begin work on a customs union. But to put the union into effect, Italy and France have to settle a lot of little problems that cause friction.

One thing that long had bothered the French was that "cognac" was made in Italy. The French said cognac is cognac only when made near the town of Cognac, France.

So the Italians have agreed to call their "cognac" by the name of "arzente."

Wage Pact Opposition Jeopardizes Dock Peace

2000 at Brooklyn To Turn Down Offer; Ryan Sees Hand of Reds in Rejection

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—Opposition to a new tentative wage agreement to end the paralyzing East Coast waterfront tieup arose here tonight and was reported developing in three other major Atlantic ports.

The first organized opposition to the pact developed in Brooklyn where a police-estimated 2000 AFL longshoremen decided at a meeting to reject the proposed contract when they vote Saturday, the official date for balloting among East Coast dock workers. The 13 Brooklyn locals have 13,000 members.

On the other hand, an international officer of the Longshoreman's Association (AFL) announced today that Philadelphia's 6500 longshoremen will return to work Monday.

Paul Baker, union international president, said a general membership meeting of the Philadelphia dock workers voted to accept the contract proposals made by the New York Shipping Association.

Ryan Sees Communist Hand

Joseph P. Ryan, who heads the East Coast stevedores, termed the opposition in Brooklyn "an attempt by the Communist Party to becloud the issues."

He also declared that many of those at the Brooklyn meeting "are not members of the organization. They are men we allowed to work on the piers during the war."

Ryan declared that the vote to be cast Saturday by secret ballot will be by "members of the union in good standing."

The Brooklyn longshoremen made their decision at a gathering called to form a rank and file committee to fight acceptance of the new pact.

The men also called upon the rest of the longshoremen in the Brooklyn locals to vote against the proposed agreement Saturday.

While police put the attendance at the Brooklyn meeting at 2000, Ryan said reports to him indicated about 1000 or 1100.

Earlier, Ryan said that in the event of union ratification of the new agreement any union member who reported to work at 7:55 a. m. (EST) Sunday would be permitted "to work any ship in any ports affected by the strike."

Hope to Resume Shipping

These actions came as the Nation's strike-bound shipping industry hoped for an affirmative vote from East and West Coast maritime unions to begin early normal operations.

A "yes" vote by some 92,000 union members on proposed wage pacts was needed to bring an end to the East and West Coast dock workers' strikes and free some 500 vessels from their piers.

Several longshoremen at the Brooklyn meeting told newsmen that a Boston delegate advised the gathering that longshoremen in his port and in Philadelphia and Baltimore also were not agreeable to the new terms.

Rejection Saturday by longshoremen in these ports and the 13 Brooklyn locals might well mean defeat of the new wage contract since their number could outweigh whatever "yes" votes are cast elsewhere on the Atlantic Coast.

A previous East Coast contract, which called for a 10-cent hourly wage boost, was rejected earlier this month, setting off the current waterfront tieup.

Other Workers Idled

Ending of the strikes would restore the jobs of thousands of rail and other workers made idle by the cargo tieups and would release some 30 million dollars of Marshall Plan goods on Eastern docks.

The new agreements, reached yesterday, would give 65,000 members of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association on the East Coast a 13-cent hourly pay hike in the straight time, day shift rate of $1.75, and West Coast CIO stevedores a 15-cent an hour boost to $1.82 in the basic wage.

The ILA rise, retroactive to August 21, was 12 cents lower than the lowest union demand while the new rate of $1.82 was what the West Coast longshoremen were asking when they struck September 2.

The East Coast pact was accepted today by the New York Shipping Association, the employer group.

A spokesman for the CIO International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's union in San Francisco said the vote by the stevedores there "most likely" would be over the weekend.

$19 Million Assessment Boost Seen for Nearby Maryland

A boost of more than 19 million dollars in the assessed valuation of property and improvements in the Silver Spring-Takoma Park area was predicted yesterday by a Montgomery County official.

Wilton T. Allen, supervisor of assessments, said 15 of the area's 28 subdivisions had been reassessed, and completed figures show an increase of almost 14 million dollars.

Reassessment of the remainder of the subdivisions is to be completed by April 1, he said, and the new figures will be entered on tax books May 1, to become effective July 1. He estimated the tentative valuation already promised $84,000 annually in additional taxes, which, he said, would be used in figuring taxes to support the 1949-50 budget.

In some cases, Allen declared, land assessments have been increased as much as 100 per cent, while the average increase on homes has been about 20 per cent.

Child Victims of Evictions Taxing D. C. Welfare Board

Temporary care of young children of evicted families is straining Board of Public Welfare resources, it was disclosed at its monthly meeting yesterday.

John W. Tramburg, director, said it is "a big problem," and the children from families who have been evicted "are coming in ever increasing numbers."

Lack of adequate accommodations and staff are the chief difficulties in caring for the children, he said.

Tramburg said that, including the newcomers, "as of Wednesday we had 69 children and 14 babies to care for until new homes can be provided," and "it is probably the highest number we have had."

Among the cases he cited as typical was that of an evicted family that lived in the basement of a friend's home until the latter needed the space for winter coal.

A number of the evictions are due to the courts' ordering families to move from condemned properties so that they may be razed for new construction sites, Tramburg said.

The 69 children are now being cared for in the Dunbar Building on the old receiving home grounds. The building was intended to house 22 persons in individual rooms, but to meet the present situation an assembly room has been pressed into service.

The 14 babies are being cared for in a separate building.

N. Y. Suspensions Approved by AVC

Cleveland, Nov. 26 (AP).—Administration forces tonight won approval of the American Veterans Committee convention for suspending 13 New York City chapters and denying their delegates convention seats.

In the first round of a factional battle, which crowded out the previously scheduled evening program, delegates voted, 13,752 to 10,712, against admitting to their third annual meeting representatives of the suspended chapters.

The organization has a total paid-up membership of about 40,000. There were 1084 chapters polled in the roll call.

The 13 New York chapters, with a membership of about 1000, were suspended earlier this month by the 25-member national planning committee which governs AVC between conventions.

The chapters were disciplined by the committee for seating Richard Crohn as a delegate in a metropolitan area council meeting last September. Crohn previously had been suspended by the national planning committee for lending the AVS's name to partisan political activity by appearing at a Wallace-for-President rally.

The Ernie Pyle Chapter of AVC, in which Crohn was a member, had its charter revoked by the committee as a result of the dispute, and Attorney Morris Pottish of New York, who presided at the metropolitan area council meeting, was expelled. The committee is asking convention approval for both of these actions, too.

Earlier today, delegates heard Housing Expediter Tighe Woods announce plans for a continued and stiffened rent control policy and an improved veterans' housing program.

Woods said "the housing shortage is almost as bad now as it was when postwar housing construction began" because "about 1,300,000 new family units have been formed since April, 1947, against 1,400,000 new dwelling units in the same period."

The new Congress will be asked for authority to assess triple damages against landlords who overcharge, Woods said.

"All they have to do now is return the amount overcharged," he added. "If the same practice were followed with respect to shoplifters, some of our large department stores would go broke paying the salaries of private detectives."

Another part of his program, Woods said, is to restore rent controls to apartment hotels.

Retirement Delay

Mitchell To Stay on At CSC Post

Harry B. Mitchell agreed yesterday to delay his retirement and stay on as president of the Civil Service Commission.

After a conference with President Truman, the 70-year-old Mitchell told reporters:

"The President has asked me to stay on and delay my retirement."

Mitchell was eligible for retirement last June 1, but President Truman signed an executive order extending his period of service to December 31. Now another order will be signed further extending his service. Mitchell said he does not know how long the extension will be, but six months was the time expected in other circles.

He has been a member of the Civil Service Commission since May, 1933. He is a former resident of Great Falls, Mont.

Slav's Attack On U. S. Acts As Soporific

Paris, Nov. 26 (AP).—Russian bloc delegates charged today that the United States "is waging war against the Greek people" and conducting an economic cold war on eastern Europe.

Some of the other delegates in the United Nations Assembly slept through the harangues.

The Assembly sided with the United States on the economic aid ssue. It voted, 33 to 6, against a Polish resolution which Western delegates said looked innocent but actually was a condemnation of American support of the European Recovery Program.

Hector McNeil, Britain's acting Foreign Secretary, was among those who dozed off when Ales Bebler of Yugoslavia began an attack on American policies in Greece.

Speaking loudly in French, Bebler declared:

"In short, the United States of America is waging war against the Greek people. They (the United States) are doing it openly before the eyes of the whole world." He took the view that the present anti-Communist Greek government does not represent the Greek people.

The national Greek army is "teeming" with United States officers known as liason officers and war is being waged with the tacit approval of the United Nations, Bebler said, adding:

"The United States is waging this war for reasons which are revealed by the building of military airports in Greece for their Flying Fortresses and the building of ports and strategic roads in the direction of the northern frontiers of Greece."

He called on the Assembly to reject a Political Committee resolution which condemns Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria for helping the Communist rebels in Greece.

U. S. Reveals 1949 Model Atom Furnace

Chicago, Nov. 26 (AP).—Scientists lifted the curtain a little today on a new 1949 model that excites them far more than the new cars.

It's an atomic furnace — the "hottest" and biggest in the Government's research program.

The furnace, the first started and slated for completion since the war, will be ready for operation in the spring at the Brookhaven national laboratory, Upton, N. Y.

Dr. Lyle B. Borst, 36, director of the nuclear reactor program at Brookhaven, gave some details at a meeting of the American Physical Society.

The furnace, or reactor, can unloose such a barrage of neutrons that 5000 billion bombard each square centimeter of its surface every second.

This is 10,000 times the strength of the Nation's first uranium chain reactor—the graphite-uranium pile erected in 1942 at the University of Chicago's Stagg Field.

The Brookhaven pile will be kept "cool" by fan-generated air currents. The Stagg Field pile had no cooling system and had to operate at low power.

The strength, or high neutron flux, of the Brookhaven pile will enable scientists to create on a mass-production basis up to 200 or more radioactive isotopes—atoms that can be traced by their radioactivity wherever they go.

Dr. Borst said in an interview that research will be the prime purpose of the reactor. The question of whether the pile will generate power or electricity has not been decided, he said.

New Oxygen Isotype Found

Discovery of a new radioactive isotype of oxygen called oxygen 14 was reported by three Princeton Universtiy scientists.

The new isotope, reported by Dr. R. Sherr, Dr. M. G. White and H. R. Muether, has a shorter life than the previously discovered isotope and will be valuable principally in basic research, Dr. Sherr said.

By the United Press

The World Food Organization last night tentatively approved an investigation of international funds available to poorer nations for projects that would increase their food production.

The action was taken by a special commission of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization that is surveying world food needs. It still is subject to review by the full conference.

The investigation was proposed jointly by the United States and Australia after the commission defeated an Irish resolution declaring that funds available to the World Bank are "manifestly inadequate."

Previously, the bank was criticized by James M. Dillon, Irish Minister of Agriculture, as an "international joke."

China and Ceylon supported him. China said it is almost impossible for a poor nation to get a bank loan.

The proposed investigation would determine exactly how much money is available to so-called "have-not" nations for agricultural projects such as dams and irrigation. It also would determine if such money is being used.

The food organization's 18-nation council would make the investigation. It would report back to FAO's fifth annual conference in Havana next year.

The attack on the World Bank brought a sharp retort from a United States spokesman, Edward G. Cale of the State Department's Commodity Branch. He said the food meeting was no place to discuss such grievances. But he acknowledged the need for closer cooperation between the bank and FAO when nations seek farm loans.

Army Calls On Doctors To Volunteer

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Young doctors and dentists who volunteer for military service will receive higher pay than those who wait to be drafted, Defense Secretary James Forrestal said yesterday.

Declaring the armed forces are in "extreme need" of qualified medical and dental personnel, the defense chief issued a call for volunteers.

Under the law, he pointed out, men who accept military commissions and report for active duty before being drafted will receive $100 a month more than if called up by selective service and subsequently commissioned. Qualified graduates are eligible for appointment and will not be called to duty until they complete their current year of internship, Forrestal said.

Meanwhile, Selective Service Headquarters turned down a proposal that chiropractic students be deferred from the draft.

In response to a protest from the National Chiropractic Association and National Capital Chiropractic Society, Draft Chief Lewis B. Hershey replied:

The armed forces need doctors and some other members of the healing arts professions badly. Therefore they are deferring students. However, they are not looking for chiropractors and therefore they see no special need for deferring chiropractic students.

Jews Holding Trapped Foe Pending Pact

Paris, Nov. 26.—Israel insisted tonight that Egypt must agree to armistice talks before the Jews free 1200 Egyptian troops trapped at Fauja in the Negev.

Aubrey S. Eban of Israel told the Security Council's seven-nation Palestine Committee that his government was willing to review the entire Negev situation. But first, he said, Egypt must accept the Council's November 16 resolution asking Arabs and Jews to negotiate on an armistice throughout the Holy Land.

Israel formally accept the call for armistice talks today. There have been no replies from the Arab states.

In turn, Mahmoud Fawzi of Egypt declared Israel was defying the Council's order of November 4 for withdrawal to the lines occupied before October 14 in the Negev.

"If the United Nations cannot handle this microscopic matter with the support of the big powers I wonder when and where it can handle anything else," he commented.

Dr. Ralph Bunche, acting U. N. mediator, told the Council Israel was refusing to give up Beersheba, Biblical town in the southern Negev that was taken in the offensive beginning October 14. She is insisting on keeping some mobile forces in the Negev area which she claims were there before October 14, Bunche added.

He said Egypt, on the other hand, has refused to leave some strategic positions unless Israel complies with the withdrawal order.

Bunche reported Israel has agreed to permit food and medical convoys to pass to the trapped Egyptian garrison at Faluja.

The committee adjourned, subject to any request Bunche might make for it to reconvene.

Britain Orders Cotton Shipment Suspension

A temporary suspension in shipments of raw cotton to Britain has been ordered by British officials pending an effort to obtain Marshall Plan financing for previous cotton purchases.

Britain has asked the Economic Cooperation Administration to approve the outlay of 21 million dollars for cotton bought prior to May 21, a spokesman said.

On that date the ECA said that European countries must get ECA authorization in advance, before entering into cotton purchase contracts, if Marshall Plan financing were needed.

ECA officials indicated last night that the agency looks favorably on assuming payment for the 21 million dollars because it was for cotton bought prior to the May 21 regulation.

Conservative Defeats Laborite in Scotland

Glasgow, Scotland, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Conservative T. G. D. Galbraith, a schoolmaster, won a parliamentary by-election in the Hillshead division today, defeating Laborite T. A. MacNair, a bookseller, by 8641 votes.

Succeeding Conservative J. S. C. Reid, who resigned his seat, Galbraith received 16,060 votes to 7419 for MacNair. His majority was 220 greater than that run up by Reid in 1945, when there was also a Liberal Party nominee in the race.

Siam Asks Arms For 5 Battalions

Authoritative quarters said yesterday that Siam has asked the United States for arms to equip five battalions for possible use against Communists along the Siamese-Malayan border.

The request was made to the State Department and is understood to be under consideration of the State and Army Departments. A decision may come within two weeks.

Military sources here declined to say what sort of equipment Siam has asked.

Neutrals Seek New Berlin Compromise

Paris, Nov. 26 (AP).—The six neutrals of the Security Council began discussions tonight on a new compromise formula to end the Berlin blockade.

Their discussions were based on Soviet and Western power replies to five questions from Juan Bramuglia, leader of the neutrals, concerning details of the Berlin currency tangle which were published tonight.

In its reply the Soviet Union stood pat on the Moscow agreement of August 30 for the introduction of the Soviet zone mark as Berlin's only currency as a condition to the ending of the blockade. The accord never was put into effect because the four military governors of Germany split on interpretations of how the mark would be controlled.

The joint Western reply showed Britain, France and the United States called for a four-power financial commission to supervise the activities of the bank in the Soviet sector that would issue the marks.

They also maintain that the German city administration should be the agency for licensing Berlin's civilian import and export trade under supervision of the four-power commission.

The Russians said the commission itself, in which they would have a voice, should do the licensing.

The Western replies specified that the American, British and French military authorities should have the right "freely to import food and fuel and power" into their sectors and should control the sale of these imports.

The Russians exempted western shipments of food, fuel and power from the license requirement when such deliveries were intended to supply the Berlin population in the form of aid. The phase about aid was not explained.

Troubled China's New Premier

Reds Charge U. S. Forces Aid China Troops

Nanking, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—The Chinese Communist radio charged tonight that U. S. forces were taking over garrison duties from Chinese Nationalists in the seaport of Tsingtao.

The broadcast from North Shensi quoted "travelers from Shantung province" as the basis for its report that U. S. forces had already occupied Tsingtao's largest buildings, wharves, airfields and water supply sources.

The charge came as Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek appointed men considered liberals to two key political posts.

Observers said a "liberal" trend may be foreshadowed by the appointments of Dr. Sun Fo as premier and Chang Chun as head of the important policymaking central political council.

Sun, 53, former vice president, is the American-educated son of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, founder of the Chinese Republic. He was authorized to begin formation of a war cabinet with broad emergency powers.

Sun replaces Wong Wen-hao, who resigned after the failure of his economic reform program. Chang replaces the extreme rightist Chen Li-fu as head of the central council.

A big battle was shaping south of Suchow, where the Communists reportedly rushed four of Gen. Chen Yi's columns. They were moving under heavy Nationalist air attack toward the Suhsien-Linpi area, 45 miles south of Suchow and 145 miles northwest of Nanking.

The government's Central News Agency admitted it had erred two days ago in reporting Nationalist capture of Suhsien.

Allies Printing More on Nazis' Russian Deals

By The Associated Press

The United States, Britain and France are planning to publish new facts about Spain and Russia's secret negotiations with Nazi Germany, it was disclosed yesterday.

Details of the prewar Hitler-Stalin deal to divide Poland will be bared for the first time in two separate 1000-page volumes now under preparation.

Evidence of German, Italian and Russian intervention in the Spanish civil war will feature a third volume dealing with Franco's relations with Hitler from 1936 to 1939.

Diplomatic officials told a reporter the State Department, in cooperation with the British and French foreign offices, plans to start publishing these three documents early next year. They will be printed in English, French and German.

25 Volumes Due in All

They will be but 3 of the 25 volumes now being prepared by historians of the three countries from German records captured by American First Army troops in the closing days of the war.

Soviet Russia's relations with Germany will be included in two volumes telling of general Nazi foreign policy prior to the outbreak of war in September 1939, not in separate volumes.

This may be due to a desire to avoid further disturbing their touchy relations with Russia. Moscow bitterly denounced the State Department early this year after it published part of the record of Soviet-German negotiations as revealed in the Nazi documents.

A Government official working on the project said, however, the two new volumes being edited now will contain "twice as much detail" on this subject as the earlier State Department volume which ran 362 pages. This fact alone may provoke a new outburst from Moscow.

Official German documents will be published intact to show step-by-step the secret intrigues which led to the 1939 Russian-German nonaggression pact which doomed Poland.

The papers then will trace in detail the growing distrust between the two countries resulting from their failure to agree on "spheres of influence" despite lengthy negotiation.

Defense Pact To Be Given U. S. Shortly

London, Nov. 26 (AP).—Authoritative diplomatic sources said today the five nations of the Brussels Alliance have completed their draft of a proposed defense pact with the United States and Canada.

The pact may be submitted to the United States and Canada in Washington next week.

Representatives of Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg completed work on the document in Londo several days ago and handed it over to their governments for approval. Several suggested changes, mostly in phraseology, have now been incorporated, it was reported.

There has been no official disclosure of the terms of the draft, but it is believed to provide for a 50-year alliance without definitely committing the Western Hemisphere countries to go to war should there be an attack on one of the members.

Diplomatic officials said an attempt will be made in Washington to complete a treaty in time for President Truman to lay it before Congress on January 20.

Spaak Forms New Coalition Government

Brussels, Nov. 27 (AP).—Socialist Paul-Henri Spaak announced tonight he had succeeded in forming a new government in which he will continue as Premier and Foreign Minister.

The cabinet consists of eight Catholics, seven Socialists and two nonparty men, a coalition similar to that which resigned last week. The cabinet fell when Minister of Justice Paul Struye quit under fire from Socialists in Parliament for his pardoning of two Belgians who collaborated with the Germans.

Struye, a Catholic, was supported by other Catholics of the old cabinet. His job in the new cabinet was given to another Catholic, Henri Moreau de Melen.

Gaston Eyskens, Catholic, who failed to form a new government, continues as Minister of Finance and Vice Premier.

The Ministry of Foreign Trade, which includes administration of European recovery aid, goes to a nonparty man, George Moens de Fernig. Dispute over the post between Catholics and Socialists prevented Spaak from organizing a new government on his first try.

Col. Raoul de Fraiteur continues as Minister of Defense, the other nonparty post.

The Ministers of Fuel and of Food and Imports were abolished. Their duties were spread to other ministries.

Dail Approves Bill Giving Eire Freedom

Dublin, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Dail (Parliament) approved tonight the second reading of the Republic of Ireland" bill, which cuts Eire's last legal ties with the British Commonwealth.

The second reading is decisive. The bill now goes to a committee for possible amendment and then to a routine final third reading and passage.

L-S-M-U-Lambda Sigma Men Unite . . .

The Washington Post

FIFTY YEARS AFTER—This old school bell rang again last night for Central High School's MU chapter members of Lambda Sigma Fraternity. They met at a reunion dinner in the National Press Club auditoruim to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the frat. Taking part in the ringing of the bell—which first called students to class in 1879—are (from left) Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, class of '98; Col. Thomas M. Spaulding class of '99; John Howard, class of '26, and toastmaster for the banquet, and Donald McLaughlin, now president of the Lambda Sigma chapter at Central. General Grant is fulfilling a promise he made 50 years ago, when, as a 17-year-old national officer of the frat, he promised to come to Washington to install the new chapter. Here he is presenting the time-faded charter to Colonel Spaulding, the chapter's founder, who has waited patiently since the Spanish-American War prevented Grant from reaching Washington

Central High Frat Marks Its 50th Year

Nearly 150 active and alumni members of Central High School's Mu Chapter, Lambda Sigma, last night agreed that high school fraternities "are a very good thing."

Agreement on the sentiment, voiced by Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant 3d and other speakers, was general at the dinner celebrating the Mu Chapter's 50th anniversary.

The dinner was held at the National Press Club in an atmosphere of general good fellowship, and occasional flying spitballs and jeers as the years slipped away from the "brothers" of years past.

Brother Grant (Zeta, '97) and Col. Thomas M. Spaulding, USA (retired), were the chief guests of honor. Brother Spaulding was the founder and first eminent caput of Mu Chapter. Brother Grant, as a national officer, was to give Mu Chapter its charter, back in 1898, but had to accompany his mother from their home in New York to Puerto Rico, where his father was serving in the Spanish-American War.

Last night the charter, in its heavy brown frame, stood on a chair behind the speakers' table.

John M. Howard (Mu, '24) was toastmaster. Among those at the table with him were Robert A. Maurer, former Central principal and past vice president of the Board of Education; Wallace E. Brown, first national head of the fraternity; Judge M. Brice Claggett (Mu, '07) of the Municipal Court of Appeals; Jackson Wheatley (Rho, '19), trustee of the fraternity endowmnent fund, and Donald P. McLaughlin (Mu, '45), Eminent Caput of the active chapter.

A feature of the program was the presentation of a silver bowl to Robert E. Newby "for having done more for Central High School, the club and for Lambda Sigma than any other alumnus."

Berliners Vanish From Soviet Sector

Berlin, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—At least 11 residents of Berlin, all active in the city's political life, have "either been arrested or have disappeared from the Soviet sector" during the past two months, British military government authorities announced today.

Four of the 11 persons were said to be employes of the Berlin Executive Council.

Dr. Kurt Mueckenberger, head of the Berlin coal organization, was arrested August 17 and was to be tried before a Soviet military tribunal, the announcement said. Mueckenberger was arrested after he obeyed orders of the Western Allies and refused to comply with a Soviet directive that "dismissed" him from office.

A British official said police were alerted last night to stand guard over city canal locks in the western sectors of Berlin to prevent any Soviet attempt to remove vital equipment into the eastern sector.

Berlin's canals are considered a part of the Soviet zone waterway system, and Russia claims jurisdiction over them, even though they run through the city's western sectors.

The Anglo-American airlift was slowed down by fog today.

Soldiers Kill 2 Japs

Sapporo, Japan, Nov. 26 (AP).—Two Japanese were shot to death and five others were beaten by a pair of unidentified American soldiers last night.

14 Germans Are Hanged

Munich, Nov. 26 (AP).—Fourteen German war criminals were hanged at Landsberg prison today—four of them for slaying captured American airmen.

Since the middle of last month 87 men have been executed out of 139 convicted by United States war crimes courts on charges of killing concentration camp inmates and American prisoners of war. The cases of 48 of the 52 remaining under sentence of death are being reviewed.

Executed for slaying captured American airmen were SS Lieuts. Karl Adam Kirschner and Albert Hammer, Heinrich Baumann, a Wuerzberg policeman, and Andreas Ingerbrand, 46, a Nazi Party official.

Richard Schulze, 50, former chief of all criminal apprehension agencies in Germany, was granted a stay of execution today. An Army announcement said further information warranted renewed investigation.

He was charged with issuing an order in July, 1944, that all captured Allied fliers were to be killed, and "if the populace did not do it, the police should."

MacArthur Tightens Secrecy About 7 Japanese Hangings

Tokyo (Saturday) Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters today took over the publication of all news concerning Gen. Hideki Tojo and his six fellow warlords condemned to hang for their crimes.

It was learned that four gallows had been erected on a raised platform at Sugamo Prison, where the condemned men were kept, and that all was ready to hang them at the time specified by MacArthur.

In taking over news of the condemned men, MacArthur's headquarters said there would be a release daily at 10 a. m. (8 p. m. EST).

At 10 a. m. today Maj. Fred May, news editor of MacArthur's public information service, said there would be no communique today. He said he took this to mean that Tojo and the others had not yet been hanged.

Mrs. Tojo has asked MacArthur to turn over the bodies of Tojo and his fellows to their families for funerals in accordance with Buddhist rites.

"I am a soldier's wife," she said. "I have no regrets that my husband should end his two years of imprisonment with his execution.

"But respect to bodies is both an old Oriental tradition and one of Buddhism. I pray that the body of my husband be returned to his family so he can be given a proper funeral, and I ask that this privilege be given to the families of the six others."

October net income of Capital Transit Co. totaled $884, but the report included only one day (October 31) of the fare increase. Effect of the new rates will be shown for a full month in the report for November operations.

The October black-ink figure, small as it was, compared with deficits of $25,197 for July, $41,729 for August and $36,406 for September.

Operating revenues last month totaled $2,244,413, off $198,709 from October, 1947. Revenue passengers numbered 28,953,726, a decrease of 3,910,253 from last year. In October, 1947, the company reported a net loss of $257,522, caused by the inclusion in the accounts of that month of the increased wages granted by arbitration, retroactive to July 1, 1947.

For the first 10 months this year, Capital Transit reported net income of $274,165 compared with a net loss of $11,793 in the same 1947 period. Operating expenses, taxes and depreciation were $21,748,224, or a decrease of $562,296. Operating revenues of $22,241,344 were down $335,822.

Scientist Hits Child Mind in World Affairs

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

American voters were urged last night to consider "searchingly" the "emotional behavior" records of candidates for high office.

Dr. Edward A. Strecker, psychiatrist, offered the advice to physicians attending the monthly lecture series sponsored by the National Naval Medical Center, at Bethesda, Md.

Man's mental system of checks and balances needs adjustment to an international scale if we are to avoid future wars, he said. And, in the crises, he added, "It's extremely important for us to know whether they (the Nation's leaders) can be counted on to conduct the affairs of state in thoughtful, emotional grown-up fashion."

"A democracy that cannot cross the frontiers of its own nationalism is not of the essence of true democracy," he said. "Eventually, it will cease to be a democracy."

The immaturity of the international mind is apparent everywhere, he said.

"In our own legislative halls and in highly placed seats there are men who have not outgrown their emotional diapers, which, barring the kind of miracle that rarely happens, are destined to become their shrouds," Dr. Strecker said.

It is noteworthy to record, he added, that the lives of the three dictators, Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini, do not show a "reasonably emotionally healthy childhood."

"In the case of the three dictators," he declared, "it is well to remember that fear engendered and dammed back in childhood is likely to produce hostility and aggressiveness directed at the personal environment in adult life. This is a commonplace observance by psychiatrists in the life histories of psychotic and neurotic patients . . .

"It is dangerous to entrust power to those who have not had a reasonably emotionally healthy childhood. The pathological compromises made in their twisted minds may mean misery and catastrophe for millions of human beings."

Struggle for Compromise

Just as physical functions depend on compromises within the body, he said, the soul, or psyche, struggles within itself "to achieve fairly satisfactory behavior compromises," on a community level, at least. But—— "We have not found out how to prevent great masses of people, gathered together into nations, from periodically tearing out each others' throats with fang and claw, sharpened to deadly precision by the instruments of modern war. The record is shameful," he declared.

The problem, he said, is one of "immaturity of the mind," with an unadjusted system of checks and balances. He said the international mind had not developed an ability to maintain a balance, such as is illustrated on a smaller scale by love against hate, submission against agression, and "even simply physical acts . . . a wish to pick up a book must first subdue an unconscious wish not to pick it up."

Dr. Strecker, professor of neuropsychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania, urged that psychiatry "and other humanitarian disciplines" be given Federal support to "help write and spread the gospel of mental hygiene," toward a goal of compromise, "before chaos."

2 Congressmen Say Entertainers Avoid Taxes

By The Associated Press

Representative Curtis (R., Nebr.) and Representative Priest (D., Tenn.) both protested yesterday against the practice among some highly paid entertainers of selling their services as a "business." They suspected steps to avoid payment of high income taxes.

Returns acquired through sale of services are classed as capital gains and subject to a flat 25 per cent tax. Normal income levies on salaries are such services would range up to three times as much.

Priest wrote a letter to George J. Schoeneman, chief of the Internal Revenue Bureau, voicing concern over the practice. He said it is costing the Government millions of dollars in tax revenue that will have to be made up from other sources.

Curtis, in a statement, indicated he believes the bureau has given tacit approval to the system. He agreed with Priest that it means the amount of taxes saved by anyone using the "incorporation" method will "have to be dug out of the pockets of thousands of small taxpayers."

3 Lawyers Aid Tobin in Drafting New Labor Law

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin last night called in three private lawyers to help him draft suggestions for a new labor law to replace the Taft-Hartley Act.

President Truman has asked all Government agencies to report their legislative recommendations to the White House by Monday. Tobin hopes to send his labor law blueprint to Mr. Truman by then.

He said that besides top Labor Department lawyers, he would confer with Fred W. Livingston and William Bennett, both New York lawyers, and William Wallace, Boston attorney.

"It was necessary to call on outside assistance because of the cuts in personnel made necessary by the drastic reductions in the department's appropriations voted by the last Congress," Tobin said.

"Crusade In Europe"

General Eisenhower's remarks on the criticism that has appeared in England of his memoirs were typical of a man who is the very embodiment of international teamwork. All who know him will believe him when he says he would not have written the book if he had felt that it was going to exacerbate national partisanship. Comb the book and you will find not a phrase in it over which any reasonable person could take umbrage—no belittlement of the British, no underestimation of the British contribution. The only criticism in it is self-criticism, and this modesty and restraint is, if anything, the fault with it—it is not, as the general himself says, a "complete history." Crusade In Europe is a record of the greatest demonstration of all time that men under many flags can and will fight under a common commander for a common cause. By magnifying this achievement, and glossing over the difficulties, Eisenhower's book is a signal contribution to international cooperation.

This is now the considered judgment of subsequent British reviewers of Crusade In Europe who have read the book as well as the serialized excerpts. The fresh tributes to General Eisenhower may have been emphasized in order to offset the bad taste left in the mouth after the initial criticism. But they all have a genuine ring about them. One from Lord Ismay, writing in the London Daily Telegraph seems to be particularly noteworthy, judging from the cabled digests. Lord Ismay was the opposite of our Admiral Leahy in the wartime administration of Mr. Churchill, and thus had as close a contact with General Eisenhower as any Englishman. After praising General Eisenhower for his "simplicity, sincerity, and modesty," Lord Ismay refers to the Montgomery-Eisenhower differences, and then says history will have to judge whether Eisenhower was "a superb coordinator" or "a great commander with iron nerve." Either verdict would be a magnificent epitaph.

History must be left with the decision as to the rightness or wrongness of the strategy for the conquest of Germany. The fact is that at the time Eisenhower's decision was generally applauded. On the morrow of victory not only Montgomery but also the British Chief of the Imperial Staff, Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke (now Lord Alanbrooke) said, "Thank God, Ike, you stuck by your plan. You were completely right." We feel that no other decision than the broad front strategy at the time was tolerable. At any rate, Crusade In Europe will add to General Eisenhower's laurels. His record since the war has enhanced his reputation as the greatest exemplar now living of a man who can be a world citizen and a great American at the same time.

Venezuelan Tragedy

More and more examples are coming to light of how the proposed hemisphere arms program would expand the power of the military at the expense of the civil authority in Latin America. The latest instance is in Venezuela, where the army has set itself up as the arbiter of the kind of government the country should have. In so doing it has deposed Venezuela's first popularly elected President, chosen last December by some 70 per cent of the voters. The military coup makes mincemeat of the fine sentiments exchanged when that President, the scholarly Romulo Gallegos, visited this country in July and dedicated a statue to Simon Bolivar.

Although there is no indication that the revolt was other than a purely domestic affair, undoubtedly its perpetrators were encouraged by the success of a similar uprising in Peru a month ago. The immediate cause seems to have been the resentment of military leaders that they were not given more important positions in the Gallegos government. There is some evidence that the head of the military junta, Lieut. Col. Delgado Chalbaud, tried to restrain the younger officers without success. The prime mover in the ultimatum served on Gallegos and in his ouster seems to have been Lieut. Col. Marcos Perez Jimenez, who is the new Minister of Defense and one of the leaders in the junta. The part played by the army is itself ironic. It was the army which ousted President Isaias Medina in 1945 and brought to power the government of Romulo Betancourt and the Accion Democratica. It was Betancourt in turn who made possible the democratic election of Gallegos. The army has now turned on its own creature—over the issue of civilian control of the government.

The coup is tragic in more than one way. The Gallegos regime was one of the few governments in Latin America which seemed to be showing real promise of meeting the challenge of the Bogota revolution—a revolution which demonstrated graphically the great gulf between the privileged classes and the economic needs of the masses. Semi-Socialist in orientation, as was the Betancourt regime before it, the Gallegos government had made progress in overcoming illiteracy and in social and agrarian reform. The charge that it was under Communist influence is best answered by the almost complete lack of anti-United States sentiment.

Thus what has occurred in Venezuela is a blow to genuinely representative government throughout the hemisphere. There can be no permanent advance of representative institutions as long as the army is in a position to enforce its opinions. The giving of arms to Latin America, under whatever pretext, would merely encourage this process.

Dog's Tail

It has long been a puzzle to figure out where the military administration in Germany ends and the State Department begins in the determination of policy on Germany. The last time we raised the question was over the introduction of the new western currency into Berlin which made the confusion in the old German capital more confounded. At that time the general public understood that this was the handiwork of Gen. Lucius C. Clay. However, for the last few weeks the friends of our proconsul in Germany have been denying any such initiative, and the responsibility is being traced back to the State Department. The latest surprise on the German situation was the November 10 decision to allow an elected German government to determine the ultimate ownership of the Ruhr industries. The manner and lack of timeliness of the move amounted to genius. Aside from imperiling the Anglo-American-French solidarity on Berlin, the move, if left without qualifications, might have dislodged the moderate government under M. Queuille. Who did it? The sleuths, as, for instance, Harold Callender, the Paris correspondent of the New York Times, have now come up with the answer that this was the handiwork of General Clay and the British General Robertson.

Their initiative seems to have put the State Department in a dilemma. The diplomats, after all, cannot disown the military governors, and Mr. Marshall was in some difficulty on Tuesday in sugar-coating the pill for the French. For the time being he seems to have succeeded. He points out that there will be no change till a peace treaty has been negotiated, and in the meantime he and the British have invited the French to participate in the control of the Ruhr industrial complex. He adds that Ruhr industries will be freshly fragmented and that though the industries are to be put under German trustees, the Allies will nevertheless retain supervision in the interest of security.

It is doubtful, nevertheless, whether the French will be won over by these arguments. Granted that the French are difficult to deal with, especially in working together in Germany, the fact remains that no French administration could ever agree to complete Germanization in the Ruhr. This, they know, is the way back to Bismarck's Germany. The initial move has aided De Gaulle and his tirade of November 17 against it reflected French sentiment, not, as Secretary Marshall gratuitously observed, French internal politics. If De Gaulle comes to power, the British and the Americans are likely to revise their Ruhr policy fast enough—just as they had to revise policy on Germany when Hitler came in, and give to the Feuhrer many concessions that a few months before they had denied Bruening.

Whoever is responsible for present policy in Germany, the trend is now evident; the long view has been sacrificed to the short. American policy on Germany has gone the entire gamut from the Morgenthau plan for the permanent impoverishment of Germany to the prospect of all-out production and from decentralization to an increasing centralism. We confess we like the new trend little better than we liked the old. The hope we had nurtured, from the lesson of European history, was that the Ruhr would be Europeanized as a separate economic entity, with Germany itself split up into semi-autonomous laender, which might one day seek membership in a wider union of Europe. The new trend is due, as to America's contribution to it, to the duality of American control in Germany, and one of Mr. Truman's first steps in the field of foreign policy should be to end it.

World Affairs Center

Washington is not only the Capital City of the Nation but also—and it is almost unpardonably trite to say so—a world capital. The truism of the statement makes all the more astonishing the fact that Washington has not had any single coordinating center of information on international affairs. Instead, the unparalleled wealth of human and documentary source material, ranging from State Department and congressional policy-makers through the Diplomatic Corps, the international agencies like FAO and the Pan American Union have each gone their separate ways. And the consumers of information, the universities, the national organizations like the League of Women Voters, the Chamber of Commerce, the labor groups, the press, radio, and other information media have likewise worked pretty much in separate compartments.

The lack of a coordinating organ has now been remedied. Informal discussions over the past year have culminated in the formation of the Washington World Affairs Center. Launched with little fanfare on Armistice Day it is already a going concern with offices at 1712 H st. nw. and a budding membership which is open to everyone. Its purpose is to bring together for better mutual understanding and fuller public knowledge every group in Washington's international life—including the oft-forgotten Washingtonians. The service such a center can do is so great and so obvious that the puzzle is why its birth has been so long delayed. Now that it is here we give it hearty welcome and extend our hopes for success in full measure.

Labor Ambassadors

Justice Douglas was introduced to the CIO convention at Portland, Oreg., the other day as the first member of the Supreme Court to address a convention of a major labor organization. The precedent is scarcely a happy one. Labor issues are being repeatedly carried to the supreme bench. Judges who sit on that bench ought to be as free from the ring of the CIO's applause in their ears as they are from the plaudits of the National Association of Manufacturers. We felt the same way when Justice Black twice accepted awards from the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. The high degree of impartiality that the country expects of its judges can scarcely be maintained if they make a practice of delivering speeches of a semi-partisan nature before special interest groups. The fact that the speech is being interpreted as an indication that Justice Douglas may return to an active political life is sufficient reason why he should not have made it.

With some of the points Justice Douglas made we are in hearty agreement. "Today," he said, "labor, better than any other element in our society, can weld the democrats of the world into a group within its power to guide Western civilization . . ." The United States has not yet taken full advantage of the service that men with a labor background are able to render in international affairs. With labor governments or their equivalent in power in many European states, Americans who understand the labor movement are especially equipped to interpret the United States abroad. They can also most effectively counteract Soviet propaganda as to American "imperialism."

Justice Douglas' suggestion may well be carried out not only by giving greater weight to the work of labor experts attached to the American embassies abroad but also by selecting well qualified labor leaders for top diplomatic posts. In such cases, of course, they would have to cease being spokesmen for labor and become spokesmen for the United States Government. The slowness of many labor leaders to make such an adjustment in the past has doubtless been a foremost reason why they have not been given top diplomatic assignments. But there are able men in the ranks of labor who see the national interest objectively, and they can be of enormous service in the diplomatic branch.

We cannot help wishing, however, that this advice, which is remote from the work of the Supreme Court, had come from another source, or, if Justice Douglas had felt impelled to discuss the implementation of our foreign policy, he had done so more objectively. His speech is likely to be regarded as a bid for labor support for his appointment as Secretary of State. We do not think it is possible for members of the Supreme Court to take an active part in the debate of public affairs without impairing their prestige and weakening public confidence in their work as judges.

Grain For Export

How best to handle the purchase of grain for Europe under the Marshall Plan appears to have been settled for the time being by President Truman's expressed preference for Government operation, and ECA Administrator Hoffman, acceding to the President's wish, says he will revoke his order placing such operations in private channels on December 1.

A provision in the ECA law—inserted largely at the behest of the grain trade—called for maximum use of existing facilities, or, in other words, private trade channels. The Administration was left some discretion in such decisions, but obviously one of the things at which ECA is aiming is a revival of international trade as a means of restoring European economies. Such trade can never develop if the only dealings are between governments. Government control of trade tends toward the sort of permanent canalization we have been opposing in our adherence to the goal of freer trade.

These are strong reasons for encouraging a restoration of the grain trade to private channels as soon as possible. But there are even more compelling reasons why this cannot be done now. Principal among these is the fact that no matter how this country handled its grain exports, they would continue to be distributed under governmental auspices abroad. It is impossible to see how a change in the system in use here would alter the pattern in Europe. Moreover, efficiency, if not the basic, is certainly an important consideration, and large bulk shipments such as grain cannot be handled efficiently in small parcels. Buying, the scheduling of exports and the assignment of port facilities can most logically be done under unified direction. Already there are instances in which private firms have exceeded the tonnages agreed upon with ports, thus jamming port facilities. On the other hand, the Commodity Credit Corporation has been in the business of exporting since the beginning of the war and has smoothed out such technical problems. Furthermore, the CCC has control over vast quantities of stored grain which could be used for export.

In this matter the President has obviously taken the counsel of Secretary Brannan. Mr. Truman must have been influenced, in addition to the above considerations, by the inquiry into grain trade activities that is scheduled in the indictment of former Congressman Slaughter.

Letters To The Editor

Franco And The Church

It is with mingled amazement and resentment that I read the report on Franco Spain presented by the dean of the Georgetown University Graduate School. Some of the statements attributed to Father Guthrie come strangely indeed from the lips of such a learned gentleman: ". . . a dictatorship which is tolerated because Spain wants to retain its liberty," and ". . . an infallible yardstick to measure the liberty of any nation . . . is the hatred of the Russian government." Remarks of this type represent the frame of mind prevalent in Germany—and in England, France and too many other nations—which led to the rise of Hitler.

I realize that we are now engaged in a war of words with what is now the world's greatest dictatorship. Nevertheless we should constantly bear in mind the danger of attacking one disease with another, of promoting the growth of a new species of vermin in the hope that it will remove an existing pest.

There can be no doubt that Franco Spain is of the same verminous nature as was spawned in Italy and in Germany, albeit of a much weaker breed. The growth of the spirit of fascism in the past 20 years should teach us that there is little to choose between the two extremes of dictatorship. It should now be obvious that each extreme points with alarm at the other only to gain converts from the middle class which cares for neither of them.

I have noted with considerable uneasiness the fervor with which leading Catholic representatives have embraced Franco Spain specifically, and Fascist supporters in general. It would seem that even the Catholic hatred for communism should not blind the church to the fact that fascism is not a satisfactory alternative. The lessons of Italy, Germany and now of the Argentine should indicate that fascism supports those who aid it only when it is weak; when it becomes strong, it assimilates its supporters, including the churches.

Far worse, in all nations where liberty is revered, religion suffers great harm in the eyes of free people when the church aids the growth of fascism, whether at home or abroad. The Catholic Church has much to lose and little to gain by its misguided support of Franco.

"Bundle From Britain"

So the Very Rev. Hewlett Johnson, Dean of Canterbury, is a "Bundle from Britain," according to your editorial of November 16. The dean has come here in the worthy hope of saving humanity by advocating a better knowledge of Russia on our part with a consequent better understanding. But—"the dean . . . had no sooner arrived here than he began to utter mouthfuls of unconscionable nonsense," proclaims the writer from the secure vantage-ground of proper Russo-phobia and universal hysterics. The very fact that the dean was finally allowed to enter our country opened for some of us a small chink of hope, albeit very small indeed.

The American people have clearly shown that they approve a mission to Moscow, any mission to Moscow and by anybody, just so some overtures are made to improve relations between our two countries. The foreign policy issue was deliberately kept out of the recent campaign although millions of us had counted on its being brought into the open and threshed out and fought out at that time.

Election over, up went a barrage of sure-to-be Cabinet changes, simultaneous with highly accelerated activity along the old lines by the old guard. Any mission to Moscow was called off, any meeting of the President with Stalin was out. There should be no further discussion of the Big Four until the blockade was lifted, although such discussions had been held for weeks "under duress." Then, as a last straw to those who were simple-minded enough to cherish a ray of hope, came a report that the President considered the overwhelming vote in the election as a mandate for his foreign policy. And this, when the dangerous and tragic question had never been allowed either mention or discussion during the campaign.

VICTORIA L. MUNRO.

In your editorial, "Bundle From Britain,' you state: "Of course the good dean did not use the phrase 'iron curtain,' which in the lexicon of fellow travelers has connotations of blasphemy."

Since the phrase "iron curtain" first appeared in the lexicon of the late unlamented Dr. Paul Josef Goebbels, one wonders whether your "fellow traveler" epithet is intended to include those who hesitate to indorse the use of a trick Nazi propaganda phrase for reasons which I hope are still fairly obvious.

Shelley For Keats

Would you kindly inform Marquis Childs that in his column of November 23 he is guilty of a grave mistake. The oft-quoted line, "If winter comes can spring be far behind," is from Percy Bysshe Shelley's "Ode to the West Wind," and, as such, it was not written by John Keats.

If we must paraphrase the bards, lets paraphrase the right one. GILBERT L. ODDO.

Virginia Republicans

With Dewey polling over 170,000 votes and Truman polling only about 200,000, or with Dewey polling over 40 per cent of the total vote of Virginia, some of the grass-root Republicans are wondering if the Republican hierarchy really wants a two-party system, or if it is merely giving lip service to the idea as some of the Democratic newspapers are doing.

What are the State and district organizations doing for the precinct? Is the State organization still living in the Federal patronage atmosphere of 1928? Has anyone ever heard of the State organization filling a single local election office, even the most humble one, through its efforts?

The recent election illustrates conclusively, it would seem, that if the Republican State organization wants to capitalize on this 170,000 Republican vote, it must get the precincts organized for local elections and then fill local offices with good men who have the confidence of their community. If this is done, Virginia Republicans need not bother themselves about the outcome of State-wide and Federal elections. They will carry these as a matter of course in stride.

Maybe that the State and district organizations have been riding the Model T Federal patronage machine long enough. At least the present machine is not delivering the goods that are available. How about getting a new machine, or to change the figure, a different attitude. Under the present system the Republicans have only a handful of local offices in scattered communities. Why not work for a 40 per cent membership in the House of Delegates, for instance?

"Poor Security Risk"

I am one of the participants in the security cases mentioned in Marquis Childs' column of November 12 which dealt with the "joint orientation conference" held recently in Washington by the Department of National Defense. These "poor security risk" cases of Herb Lewin and mine at the Lester plant of the Westinghouse Corp. reveal in startling detail the drive being conducted against organized labor and political radicals under the guise of security measures.

The sitdown strike of July 12 and 13 by Local 107, United Electrical Workers, CIO, was in protest of the unilateral decision by Westinghouse and the Navy to remove me from my position as design engineer and to place me on a leave of absence without pay. The union correctly charged the corporation with a violation of the lay-off clause of its contract. This issue of abrogation of union contract by unilateral action of the military and industry was resolved in this instance in favor of the union, and Lewin and I returned to work on nonclassified material.

The second issue is the violation of civil rights. The Navy's letter of June 24 did not list any reasons for its "denial of consent" to access to classified work.

It was not until September 1, two days before my appeal hearing with the Industrial Employment Review Board that I or any interested party was informed that the original action had been taken because there were reports purporting to show that I was a member of an organization appearing on Attorney General Clark's subversive list.

More than two months after the hearing I was informed by the United States Navy that the findings of the board had upheld the Navy's action and rejected my appeal for the withdrawal of the "denial of consent." There exists no formal means of further appeal.

The remaining fundamental issue involved concerns the job rights of individuals with unorthodox political philosophy. I believe the interests of the Nation would be best served through social ownership of the basic industries and democratic control of the industries and government by the people.

I have naturally favored those organizations which have a general Socialist orientation, particularly the Workers Party because of its constructive attitude on the union movement, its determination to work for social change, and its uncompromising struggle against Stalinism. I oppose all totalitarian political forms, both Fascist and the Russian dictatorship and any moves by any government, including my own, to adopt similar methods. Such a philosophy, in my opinion, should not be a barrier to employment in any position for which the individual is qualified.

Labor unions and Socialist groups insist that fair and open hearings be held in designated courts of justice. The unions and others object to: Subversive lists, loyalty purges, denial of bargaining rights, thought control, and guilt by association.

The American labor movement recognizes the danger of the Communist Party's influence and leadership and is rejecting both by democratic methods within the unions. Those who follow the Stalinist line include experts in misleading and confusing the working people. All I have said here, all that James B. Carey said to the orientation conference in behalf of the CIO, is well known to defense officials. Nevertheless, our Government continues to attack the labor unions and Socialist groups which have proven to be the most consistent fighters against both fascism and Stalinism.

Family Turn For The Better

By Malvina Lindsay

Pickup In Home Life

AT A TIME when nearly everyone seems to be either boasting of a "dizzy" family or complaining of an archaic one, it is reassuring to get a report that American home life is showing "new strengths." It is heartening to find that in spite of a high divorce rate, of increase of employed wives and mothers, of the housing shortage, of the advent of crime thrillers on the air and in comic books, of the trek of population to the supposedly wicked city, the American family is not, after all, going to the dogs but is changing its pattern in general for the better.

Social workers, doctors, psychologists, psychiatrists and other authorities on family life brought some encouraging reports to the recent biennial meeting of the Family Service Association of America. They admitted the family today was having hard going in adapting to a rudely upset world, but they felt it was making the grade.

Among its new strengths listed were: A growing desire for home ownership; an increasing interest in education, evidenced especially in the demand for nursery schools; more participation in community and political affairs, and more hearthside discussion of them; a great increase in readership of articles on home life and child rearing; a healthier attitude toward sex; more attention to mental health; a steady advance toward democratic practices.

THUS THE family once more seems to be demonstrating what a sturdy "invalid" it is. For during every generation of the last few centuries it has been portrayed by moralists as on its deathbed—with an anarchy of free love waiting to supplant it. Often, it is true, the family has had sudden and difficult adaptations to make. One of its greatest has been to an industrial society which brought with it a changed status of women. And more general knowledge and education has brought higher standards for the family to live up to in health, nutrition, physical comfort, human relationships, personal freedom.

Today the family suffers, as it has in all eras, from the public's sentimental glorification of the good old days when all family life supposedly was like that shown in idealized hearthside pictures. And it is human nature to raise a cry of alarm against any big adaptation to social change such as the family has had to make in recent years.

One of the most promising features of home life today is that its pendulum of change is swinging near the middle. For example, it was brought out at the Family Service Conference that a more balanced attitude toward children's independence had developed following oscillations between "keeping children in subjection until the parents die, and trying to force them to make their own decisions almost from the cradle."

A SIMILAR balance seems to be developing between the old "heavy father" tyranny of the family and the later "mother knows best" dominance. Recent widespread exposures of professional "Moms" have been lessening the strength of the silver cord. At the same time there is growing emphasis on men being trained for taking more responsibility as fathers and toward the making of marriage a true partnership. And there is a general trend toward a more fundamental democratic conduct of the home with children given both rights and responsibilities.

One developing strength of the family is that it is being held together more by intangible than by material things. Its former physical setup—a large, usually tribal minded group, in a permanent abode in a rural and often isolated setting—helped greatly in giving it stability, at least of a material nature. Now it cannot depend on that. So it is of necessity slowly developing an emotional core strong and nexible enough to stand up under the constant physical changes and challenges it must meet.

It, like the rest of the world, is gradually moving toward more respect for the human spirit. Corporal punishment and other physical brutalities are not so common. Not so much psychological crippling of children is taking place. Economic opportunity is giving women members of the family more self-respect and freedom. Successful parenthood is being regarded more and more as a technique rather than something miraculous, bestowed by procreation. All in all, the family seems to have passed its most recent sick crisis, though it still needs the equivalent of a good tonic.

Corcoran Exhibit

It looks to me as if the jury in the Corcoran Gallery's exhibition tried to force their own idea of what is art down the public throat. Apparently they favored only the impressionistic school instead of selecting works of all types. At least it would appear from the samples shown in the papers.

The fact that cubistic and impressionistic works look to many laymen like representations of Nightmare Alley has no bearing on the case. Those who like the stuff have a right to have it shown in any general exhibit. On the other hand, unless the show is to be confined to this type there should be a wide range of choice. Let the public decide what it likes and let it have a voice by votes in the selection of prize winners. I am glad that the rejects are being allowed to have a separate show. JOHN W. SCOTT, JR.,

Washington Calling

Television's Swaddling Clothes

WE HAVE a new television set at our house. Whether it is just another complex toy or the revolution in entertainment and communication that many proclaim it to be, we haven't yet been able to decide.

Childs

No one can doubt the potentialities. They are breath-taking. But then, so were the potentialities of radio and too often they seem to have been drowned in the strident laughter of studio audiences cued to respond to the umteenth repetition of a joke that wasn't very good the first time it was used.

Much of what comes over television today is radio with sight added. That is, to be sure, pretty startling. The news reels on video, for example, sometimes show in the evening news events that happened the same day.

For the most part, however, the kind of imagination required to take advantage of this amazing new technology has not yet been forthcoming. Or it may be more accurate to say that the viewer (we need a whole new vocabulary) sees little evidence of it.

Yet I am inclined to believe that the revolution is already in progress. Here is a small bit of documentation pointing in that direction.

THE OTHER day I met a pair of television fans. Their experience, I would guess, is typical of what is happening to thousands of people and what will happen in the next two to four years to millions.

This husband and wife live in a Pennslyvania town of about 50,000 which is 100 miles from Philadelphia. There is no television station in the town.

Last spring Mr. and Mrs. Jones became convinced, from the experience of a tavern keeper in their town, that they could get television from a distance of 100 miles. They went to Philadelphia to buy a set and there they were told not to waste their money, since the receiving range was at the outside 25 to 30 miles.

They persisted and last May a set was installed in their home, the first set in any home in the town. On one channel the image comes through as clearly and as distinctly as it does in Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Jones having made careful comparisons on visits to the city.

They, too, had thought it might be just a novelty of which they would soon grow tired. But seven months have gone by and they are just as eager to get into the living room after supper as they were the first week.

BESIDES the good channel, they get images of varying distinctness and clarity on two other channels. Now and then they have successfully picked up Baltimore, which is nearly 200 air miles away.

They talk about the performers and commentators they see and hear as though they were personal friends. They are enthusiastic over programs like "Author Meets the Critic" and a popular science program originating in Philadelphia. They follow most sports except wrestling, which they find boring and repetitious.

And here comes the revolution. In the seven months they have had their set, they have gone to the movies twice. Normal for the pretelevision era was about 3 times a month, or 21 times against 2 times.

What is more, the Joneses no longer have very much interest in the radio programs that used to be their favorites. Sound without sight does not hold them.

Word of the success of their experiment has got around. Today television sets are selling like hot cakes in their town.

Both on the technical and the program side, television is a squawling infant. But like the horseless carriage, it seems to be here to stay and it promises to work undreamed-of changes in our way of life.

We, the public, have it within our power to shape this instrument for good or evil if we will only voice our likes and dislikes and voice them vehemently. Mere passive acceptance of whatever comes along is certainly not enough.

Political Economics

By Mark Sullivan

Wages In Truman's Inflation Program

FROM THE White House this week came announcement of a commission to lay out a legislative program for checking inflation and cost of living. Head of the commission is to be a distinguished economist, Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, which is an official body, and the commission includes five Cabinet members together with heads of other Government agencies.

Sullivan

About the nature of the program, Dr. Nourse was brief, as is proper in advance announcement. He said, "there will be a definite program," adding for emphasis and in explanation of present brevity, the word "period." Further than that Dr. Nourse went little more than to say: "It will be prepared in the light of the present situation, the party platform, and the program of the President as it has been revealed."

In the implications of those words is some inherent contradiction, for they suggest a mingling of disinterested economic considerations with interested political ones. This is further suggested by the presence, among the five Cabinet members on the commission, of two who were conspicuously active in Mr. Truman's recent campaign, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan and Secretary of Labor Tobin. To the extent, if any, that a coming program takes account of political considerations, it would be likely to be short of economic perfection. One of the most bedeviling obstacles to wise economic policy in our times is that price has become politics.

THE PRESENCE of price in politics, and its incompatability there, is suggested by a recent coincidence. Last July, the economist head of the new commission was head of the already existing Council of Economic Advisers. The council prepared a report which was laid before Congress. The report included these sentences:

"The inflationary effects have been multiplied through the price wage spiral . . . The recent attempt to hold industrial wages and reduce prices of industrial goods has evaporated. Substantial wage increases which have often been made to catch up with previous price increases, have been accompanied in turn or promptly followed by substantial raises in the prices of industrial goods."

On almost the same day when that statement of the Council of Economic Advisers went before Congress, President Truman was addressing the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia. He gave the convention reasons why he and the party could expect to win the presidential election. Among other reasons he implied that two great groups, labor and farmers, could be expected to vote for him, for if they did not they would be "the most ungrateful people in the world." And throughout the campaign Mr. Truman added, to the reasons these groups had for past gratitude, promises and implications of more.

THEREIN is the really potential key to whether there will be more inflation and higher cost of living. The program to be made by the new commission appointed this week can be judged, after it is made, by whether it faces, definitely and courageously, the part played in inflation by wage rates received by labor and prices received by farmers. These groups are the reciprocal parts of the automatic mechanism which composes the wage-price spiral. That spiral is headed for another upward spurt.

Labor leaders have stated that there will be another round of demands, the fourth, for increases in wage rates, to cover some 16 million workers, in nearly all industries. The occasion for the demands is there. In the CIO alone, some 10,000 wage contracts expire during the winter and early spring, including those in such great industries as steel. If the demands for wage increases are successful, there will result increases in costs of manufacturing goods, and these in turn will, in most lines, result in higher prices of goods to consumers.

Again in turn, higher prices of goods which farmers must buy will be recognized by the Department of Agriculture as calling automatically for higher "parity prices," upon which the department bases the figures at which it will support prices of farm crops. This is provided by the price support laws as they stand.

In spite of a present slight interruption in rising prices of goods, likely to be ephemeral, the price-wage spiral still exists, still works in the upward direction and has the makings of another dynamic spurt. In words the public used to hear on the radio from the late Major Bowes, "round she goes, and where she stops nobody knows." Considering the part which prices and wages have come to play in politics, the stopping place, if any, is to be found largely in that field.

Barkley Ruling Could Force Vote on Civil Rights Bills

place his own construction on Senate rules, told the Senate:

"I have not any doubt that when the Senate adopted Rule 22 (cloture) it intended to make it possible for the Senate to bring to a termination debate upon any matter before it."

Barkley has never intimated just how he will rule when the cloture issue again comes before the Senate but an associate said:

"If he follows his arguments on record in the Senate, I do not see how he can do otherwise than reverse Senator Vandenberg's ruling."

It was learned that the Vice President elect plans informal talks with Southern Senators, before he succeeds Vandenberg on the rostrum, in an effort to work out some amicable settlement.

He has long favored changes in the cloture rule to make it possible for something less than two-thirds of the Senate to bring any matter to a vote.

Failing an agreement Senate action tightening the rule—a step the Senate Republican leadership already is committed to—Barkley still has the power to strengthen the rule by interpretation.

Issue Tested Last August

An associate, who has worked with him in past parliamentary bouts, told newsmen he thought cloture procedure would be tightened "one way or the other."

The issues was last tested in the Senate on August 2, when 22 Senators, led by Acting Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.), signed a cloture petition.

Southern Senators, led by Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), had been filibustering a motion to call up the House-passed anti-poll tax bill.

Russell promptly made a point or order against the cloture petition. The Georgian argued that Rule 22 (cloture) was directed only at debate on a "pending measure." He contended a motion to call up a bill was not a measure within the meaning of the rule and "certainly it could not be a pending measure."

Barkley opposed the point of order. He argued a motion was a measure, within the meaning of the rule.

"I do believe that when the Senate adopted this rule it adopted it with the view and the intention and the conviction that it could bring any matter to a conclusion by the adoption of cloture," said Barkley.

"Since it was adopted, devices have been discovered and utilized by which the effectiveness of the rule is nullified . . . The object of the rule is to bring to a conclusion a discussion upon a pending matter and if we cannot bring it to a conclusion upon the prelminary motions which may be regarded as measures toward that end, then the effectiveness of the rule is completely destroyed and the object of those who wrote it and adopted it has been completely defeated."

Rules Meant to Help

Barkley went on to say that "in any parliamentary assembly the object of rules is to facilitate the transaction of business and not unduly to obstruct it."

He concluded:

"Having in mind the obvious intention of the framers of this rule and of the Senate when it adopted it, and the definition (Webster's) which is applicable, in my judgment, it seems to me that it is proper procedure to file the (cloture) petition at this time."

Associates said that if Barkley rules from the chair, as he thus argued on the floor, it will be possible to bring the President's "civil rights program to a vote with even the present loose cloture rule.

Under Vandenberg's interpretation of the rule, however, the attempt would be futile.

Ruled Vandenberg:

"From the debate on the question of the adoption of the rule it would clearly appear to the chair that it was a bill, a specific act, which was contemplated to be the 'pending measure' . . .

"No reference appears anywhere in the debate that it was the intention or purpose to bring within the scope of the rule a motion to proceed to the consideration of a bill . . ."

"The fact is," concluded Vandenberg, "that the existing Senate rules regarding cloture do not provide effective cloture. They still leave the Senate, rightly or wrongly, at the mercy of unlimited debate ad infinitum . . ."

Strasbourg Plans Altered

that army, we later found, directed that Bastogne be bypassed if defended and that the leading troops rush on to the west and then swing north to join in the major attack.

On the south Bradley had gotten off his attack on the morning of December 22. Progress was extremely slow and because of the snow-choked roads and fields maneuvers were difficult. It was the kind of fighting that General Patton distinctly disliked. It was slow, laborious going, with a sudden break-through an impossibility. Several times during the course of this attack General Patton called me to express his disappointment because he could go no faster; at the Verdun conference on the morning of the 19th he had implied, or even predicted, that he would get into Bastogne in his first rush. I replied that as long as he was advancing I was quite satisfied.

One of the breaks in our favor occurred December 23. This was a sudden, temporary clearing of the weather in the forward areas which released our air forces to plunge into the battle. From that moment onward, with some interruptions owing to bad weather, our battle-tested ground-air tactical team began again to function with its accustomed efficiency.

On the 26th, Patton at last succeeded in getting a small column into Bastogne, but he did so by a narrow neck along his left flank that gave us only precarious connection with the beleaguered garrison. It was after that date that the really hard fighting developed around Bastogne, both for the garrison itself and for the relieving troops.

I had planned to go to see Montgomery on the 23d but air travel in the rear areas was still not advisable and travel by road was slow and uncertain. Nevertheless, I decided to make a night run by railway to Brussels to see Montgomery and to return immediately upon completion of the conference.

The trip was further complicated by the extraordinary fears entertained by the Security Corps that enemy murderers were circulating in the area with the hope of killing Montgomery, Bradley, and me, and possibly others.

The report was astonishing. For several months I had been driving everywhere around France with no more protection than that provided by an orderly and an aide who habitually rode in the car with me. The story was brought to me on December 20 by a very agitated American colonel who was certain that he had complete and positive proof of the existence of such a plot. He outlined it in great detail and his conclusions were supported by other members of the Security Staff.

I discounted the murder theory but agreed to move my quarters closer to headquarters. I was convinced that the Germans had too much need of their men to use them in roaming over a wide area in search of their intended victims, each of whom could presumably be replaced. I was irritated at the insistence of the Security Corps that I definitely circumscribe my freedom of movement, but I found that unless I conformed reasonably to their desires they merely used more men for protective measures.

Consequently I promised to move out of headquarters only when necessary, provided they would cut down protective detachments to the utmost, so that soldiers could be used on the battle line and not in trailing me around.

They promised that this period of watchfulness would terminate December 23, but when I started to Brussels on December 27, I found the railway station swarming with Military Police and armed sentries. I sharply queried the security officers about this use of men but they assured me that they had merely assembled in the station individuals who were normally on duty in that vicinity. However, after we were well started on our journey I found that a squad of soldiers was accompanying me.

I remarked to the junior officer in charge of the detail that I would consider it miraculous if any ambitious German murderer could determine in advance that he would find his prospective victim on a particular railway train, at a given moment, at a given spot in Europe. I told him to keep his men inside and to avoid exposing them to the bitter cold. He agreed in principle, but so greatly impressed was he by the strictness of the orders he had received that I doubt that I saved any of the men from useless and futile activity.

It was almost noon on the twenty-eighth before I made contact with Montgomery.

We agreed that the best thing to do in this situation was to strengthen the front, reorganize units, and get thoroughly ready for a strong counterblow, in the meantime constantly preparing to beat off any German attack that might be launched. We agreed also that if no such German attack was launched Montgomery would begin his own offensive on the morning of January 3.

In the outcome there was no further German attack because of a change in enemy plans which concentrated his troops in the Bastogne area. The Allied troops on the northern flank used the intervening time to good advantage and on the morning of January 3 passed over to the offensive, in accordance with the plan adopted December 28.

On December 26, Patton had established tenuous contact with the garrison of Bastogne, while on the north the Germans had just been repulsed from a very determined and what proved to be their final, major attack on that flank. By this time the garrison at Bastogne was proving to be a serious thorn in the side of the German high command. As long as it was in our hands, the German corridor to the westward was cut down to the narrow neck lying between Bastogne on the south and Stavelot on the north.

The French continued to worry about the safety of Strasbourg. On January 3, De Gaulle came to see me. I explained the situation to him and he agreed that my plan to save troops in that region was militarily correct. However, he pointed out that ever since the war of 1870 Strasbourg had been a symbol to the French people; he believed that even its temporary loss might result in complete national discouragement and possibly in open revolt. He brought a letter saying that he would have to act independently unless I made disposition for last-ditch defense of Strasbourg. I reminded him that the French army would get no ammunition, supplies, or food unless it obeyed my orders, and pointedly told him that if the French army had eliminated the Colmar pocket this situation would not have arisen.

At first glance De Gaulle's argument seemed to be absed upon political considerations, founded more on emotion than on logic and common sense. However, to me it became a military matter because of the possible effect on our lines of communication and supply, which stretched completely across France, from two directions.

I decided to modify my orders to Devers. I told General de Gaulle that I would immediately instruct Devers to withdraw only from the salients in the northern end of his line and to make disposition in the center to hold Strasbourg firmly. No more troops would be taken away from the Sixth Army Group. This modification pleased De Gaulle very much, and he left in a good humor, alleging unlimited faith in my military judgment.

Mr. Churchill was, by chance, in my headquarters when De Gaulle came to see me. He sat in with us as we talked but offered no word of comment. After De Gaulle left he quietly remarked to me, "I think you've done the wise and proper thing."

The losses on both sides in the Battle of the Ardennes were considerable. Field commanders estimated that in the month ending January 16 the enemy suffered 120,000 serious casualties. In view of the fact that after the war German commanders admitted a loss of about 90,000, this estimate of our own would seem to be fairly accurate. In addition to personnel losses the enemy suffered serious casualties in tanks, assault guns, planes, and motor transport. These we estimated at the time as 600 tanks and assault guns, 1600 planes and 6000 other vehicles.

Our own losses were high, with the 106th Infantry Division suffering the worst. Because of its exposed position it was not only in the fight from the start, but many men were isolated and captured.

The Twenty-eighth Division was likewise roughly handled and the Seventh Armored took serious losses during its gallant defense of St. Vith. Altogether, we calculated our losses at a total of 77,000 men, of whom about 8000 were killed, 48,000 wounded, and 21,000 captured or missing. Our tank and tank destroyer losses were 733.

I wanted to pass to the general offensive as quickly as possible because I was convinced that in the Battle of the Bulge the enemy had committed all of his remaining reserves. I counted on a greatly weakened resistance from that moment onward, both because of losses suffered by the Germans and because of the widespread discouragement that I felt sure would overtake his armies.

Moreover—and this was very important—the Russians had opened their long-awaited and powerful winter offensive on January 12. Already we had reports that it was obvious that the quicker we could attack the more certain we would be that the German could not again reinforce his west front in an effort to avoid defeat.

Stockholders May Dissolve One-Ship Line

The 59-year-old Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co., which has been bucking an adverse financial tide for more than a year seems headed for permanent dry-dock.

Stockholders of the line will meet in Norfolk December 28 to vote on a proposal that the company, shipless since its lone vessel, District of Columbia, was damaged in a collision November 1, be dissolved.

Badgered by difficulties in purchasing equipment, rising costs and the expansion of other means of transportation, directors of the line last Monday adopted a resolution calling for its dissolution.

A second resolution provided for separation pay for officials and employes.

Incorporated in 1890

The company, incorporated in Virginia in 1890, lost two boats, the Northland and the Southland, when they were requisitioned by the War Shipping Board for "war purposes."

Although offered an opportunity to buy the vessels back after the war, officials of the line decided that the cost of reconverting them to civilian used would be too great.

With the requisitioning of the two craft the line continued operation with only the District of Columbia, built in 1925.

Damaged in Collision

That vessel has been out of service since it suffered extensive damage in sideswiping an oil tanker off Old Point Comfort, Va.

Financial reverses of the company were noticeable in a report issued last March which showed net income of only $6051 after taxes in 1947 as compared to a 1946 net of $21,365.

"Inability to get suitable equipment is a factor" in the directors decision for dissolution, Clarence F. Norment, jr., president of the line, said last night.

Evicted Child Care Mounts

are under 3 years of age, and cannot dress or care for themselves, thereby putting an additional burden on the staff of 33 persons who work a 40-hour week, and have to be staggered to provide 24-hour coverage seven days a week.

Board Given Setback

The Welfare Board received a setback yesterday in an opinion received from the Corporation Counsel's Office, which said the law would not allow the board to place girls in the National Training School, and that girls could be committed only by the courts.

The board has a number of girls, who have not been convicted of delinquency, but would benefit by the training at the National Training School, where vacancies exist, Tramburg said. It was the board's third attempt to secure a favorable interpretation of the law.

Raymond F. Clapp, principal assistant director, disclosed that the rate of requests for assistance by the board had been about 10 per cent less than usual during the month of October and first week of November, but had returned to the August and September level. The decline was not explained.

The board approved use of the District Bureau of Rehabilitation and its volunteer sponsor program for sponsoring boys and girls coming from the Industrial Home School in their attempt to adjust to normal community life. It also approved use of certain records on blind recipients of assistance by the Washington Society for Prevention of Blindness in a study of causes of blindness.

The board also approved: 18 adoptions; discharge from guardianship of 17 wards no longer needing care, and operations on 16 wards.

Razing Bids Rejected

In another action, the board approved the architect's proposal for renovation and replacement of equipment in the kitchen of the Home for the Aged and Infirm, but rejected bids for demolition and razing of certain old buildings on the premises on these grounds; the funds were needed to defray the cost of refurbishing the kitchen; an anticipated need for more fuel oil to operate a power plant, and a need for the buildings for storage purposes under the District's durable property program.

The board accepted a low bid of $6382 for roadways and drives on the grounds of the new Receiving Home for Children, and a low bid of $7375 for grading and sodding the grounds.

The board also received a report that its agencies and institutions had met 90 per cent of their Community Chest goal, and that 5 per cent of the unions had exceeded 100 per cent.

The Christmas occupational therapy sale will be held at the District Training School, Cottage No. 5, from 10 to 4 p. m. December 2 and 3, it was announced.

Board members present at the meeting included Edgar Morris, chairman; Fred S. Kogod, vice chairman; Mrs. Theodore Wedel, the Rev. R. W. Brooks, Mrs. Radford Moses, A. J. Driscoll and Dr. Norman Gerstenfeld.

Archbishop Adds Voice to Chest Aid Appeals

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, last night added his voice to those of five other community leaders who have made radio appeals this past week on behalf of the lagging Community Chest campaign.

The Chest, which helps support 104 Red Feather agencies in Greater Washington, still needs $1,233,028 to fill its 1949 goal. Pledges so far amount to 73.22 per cent of the $4,566,790 quota.

Speaking over Radio Station WRC, Archbishop O'Boyle cited the aim of the Community Chest as the "maintenance and development of an effective charitable and social welfare program," and declared that "every citizen without distinction should be vitally concerned in achieving this purpose."

Other Chest boosters this week, all of whom issued radio appeals, were: Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Congregation; Rear Adm. Glenn B. Davis, commandant of the Potomac River Naval Command; Joseph D. Kaufman, president of the D. J. Kaufman Co.; the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, chaplain of the Senate.

ECA Will Honor $50,000,000 of Grain Orders

The Economic Cooperation Administration said last night it will honor some 50 million dollars in grain contracts between European nations and private American dealers.

Such transactions were barred Tuesday by a directive from President Truman to ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman. By that presidential order, grain purchases financed by ECA are to continue to be handled by the Federal Commodity Credit Corporation rather than by private dealers.

However, Dennis A. Fitzgerald, ECA's director of food and agriculture told newsmen last night of an agreement to honor outstanding contracts. He said an official order covering the matter will be issued Monday.

Clause on Budget Limit Is Assailed

Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), who will head the House Appropriations Committee in the new Democratic Congress, last night called for repeal of the Congressional Reorganization Act's legislative budget machinery.

Cannon said he would introduce a resolution at the outset of the new Congress to do away with the requirement that Congress set its own budget ceilings by February 15 of each year.

The Missourian charged that two Republican attempts to set ceilings on spending durig the Eightieth Congress "proved completely meaningless." He said Democrats would have no better luck trying to fix "arbitrary ceilings."

Resolution Died

The House and Senate fell out over the legislative budget in 1947. The GOP Senate voted to cut the President's estimates 4½ billion, but the House insisted on a six-billio-dollar cut, and the resolution died in conference. In 1948, the Republican House and Senate agreed on a 2½-billion-dollar cut, but left ERP funds out of their figuring.

"Neither attempt served any purpose," Cannon told newsmen yesterday. "Even when they agreed on a spending maximum, they promptly forgot all about it."

Cannon, who argues the Democratic Seventy-ninth Congress saved more than the Republican Eightieth by flexible pruning, said he would sponsor the repeal resolution "because I don't want to violate the Reorganization Act or ignore it."

The Missouri Democrat, who served as chairman of the Appropriations Committee through the war, said he could not comment on the President's new budget in detail until it was presented, but he hopes to do these two things:

(1) Avoid deficit spending and (2) see that there is a reasonable amount available for application to debt retirement.

Points Out Goal

"My goal will be to cut as much as possible without impairing the integrity of any Government service," he told newsmen.

"There is nothing sacrosanct about any budget. The committee will scrutinize with painstaking care all money requested with the view to holding appropriations within appropriate levels for all essential purposes, always with an eye to our financial status and bearing in mind always the general welfare."

60 Contempt Cases May Be Dropped

Contempt of Congress charges against 60 persons who refused to tell two House committees if they were Communists probably will be dropped, it was revealed yesterday.

This move was inspired by unofficial advice from the Justice Department plus the fact that it is highly doubtful if the legislative machinery to press the charges can be set in motion. In addition, it is felt that the new Eighty-first Congress probably couldn't bring citations for contempt of the Eightieth Congress which will go out of existence January 3.

The 60 individuals include some 40 labor leaders and others who refused to say last summer if they were Communists when asked by a House Labor Subcommittee. The remaining 20 refused to give the same testimony before an Un-American Activities Subcommittee. Most claimed protection of the constitutional safeguard against self-incrimination.

Under existing procedures it would be necessary for the full committees to cite the witnesses to Congress which, in turn, could ask the Justice Department to bring contempt proceedings. There is considerable doubt, in the first place, that the full committees could be brought together to consider the cases before January. Even if that could be done, there would be insufficient time to present the cases to the expiring Eightieth Congress.

The Justice Department is understood to have asked the committees to go slow in the cases until it can complete its own cases against 12 Communist leaders awaiting trial after indictment by a New York grand jury. Department attorneys pointed out that if these defendants should be convicted there would be a sound legal basis for claiming that admission of Communist affiliation would be incriminating.

It was pointed out that the present move does not affect the cases of 10 Hollywood directors and writers already indicted for contempt of Congress for refusing to answer the same question before the Un-American Activities Committee. Two of these already have been convicted.

Senate Probe Asked In 5 Southern States

The National Negro Council yesterday charged that two million Negroes were denied the right to vote in five Southern States this year and asked a Senate investigation.

Edgar G. Brown, director of the council, presented petitions for the investigation at the office of Senator Jenner (R., Ind.), chairman of the Senate Privileges and Elections Subcommittee. Jenner was out of the city but office assistants said the request is under consideration.

Brown asked that public hearings be conducted at Birmingham, Ala.; Jackson, Miss.; New Orleans, La.; Atlanta, Ga., and Columbia, S. C.

Court Gives S. C. Negroes Party Rights

Charleston, S. C., Nov. 26 (AP).—A Federal District judge ruled today that Negroes have established their right to full membership in the South Carolina Democratic Party.

Judge J. Waties Waring held in an opinion that State party primaries are "the true, realistic election . . . which presidential electors, United States Senators and Congressmen are chosen" and declared that party officials have "no right to make any . . . discrimination amongst the citizens because of race or color."

The veteran Charleston judge in this way reaffirmed and made permanent his preliminary decision of last July 16, granting Negroes the right to vote in 1948 party primaries. The decision came in the case of David Brown, a Beaufort Negro, who brought action against the South Carolina Democratic Party and its officials to obtain full participation in party affairs.

Defense lawyers had argued that the party was in effect a private club and had a right to exclude whomsoever it chose, but Judge Waring rejected that theory.

"The theory has been completely outlawed and demolished," he asserted.

He likewise overruled party arguments in defense of a rule requiring primary voters to pledge their support of the principle of racial segregation. Party spokesmen had devoted major argument to defense of the party oath.

Of that, Judge Waring said today: "Under the rules adopted by the State party a Negro could never become a member, . . . could never have . . . any part whatsoever in the government of the party."

As to the party's effort to pledge primary voters to opposition to the proposed Federal Fair Employment Practices Commission Law, Judge Waring asserted: "Everyone knows that a Negro will not take a solemn oath that he is opposed to legislation that would remove discrimination against him."

"The Democratic Party as constituted cannot in the conduct of (its primary) elections make any racial or religious discrimination," he said.

One on the Aisle—

Writers Shamed By Ford Camera

By Richard L. Coe

JOHN FORD uses the screen much as a painter uses canvas. Even when he worked in black and white, one was conscious that this director's eye was the eye of a painter. Each individual frame of a Ford film is above all a picture. With the advance of Technicolor, one has felt a painter's joy as he mixes colors into a purely pictorial beauty which no other director consistently matches.

It is this quality of the screen as a painter's canvas which distinguishes "Three Godfathers," the latest Ford production now having its premiere at the Capitol. One is lulled into a mood of purely visual pleasure watching his sweeping scenes of the Southwest; each scene is captured with the painter's eye. Here is the desert of New Mexico with its incomparably muted colors, its vast reaches of sheer space, its haunting strength and loneliness.

The story of "Three Godfathers" stems from a Peter B. Kyne yarn which has been screened several times in this past. This version was written by Laurence Stallings, of "What Price Glory?" fame, and Frank S. Nugent, formerly film critic of the New York Times and most recently represented as scenarist for Ford's "Fort Apache." They tell of three thieves of the last century who, in their chase from the law, come upon a new-born baby in the desert wastes and of their battle to carry the child to the safety of a frontier town.

The story halts by the wayside to make the most of the situation of three men attending a spewing infant. At these points Ford's camera seems to stick in the sand; the script writers take over. Messrs. Stallings and Nugent are what you'd call safe writers. They pick the obvious every time. They know that closeup shots of a newborn baby are surefire audience stuff. They know that the spectacle of strong, helpless males with a weak, dependent infant is surefire. They welcome the obvious with open arms.

This insufficiency on the part of his script writers often plagues Ford. When exceptions arise, the results are outstanding, as in the case of the brilliantly knit "Stagecoach" or the raw facts of war in "The Fighting Lady." But, as both "The Fugitive" and "Fort Apache" have proved, it takes the exceptional script, disciplined as well as imaginative, to be worthy of Ford's stirring eye.

Along with Ford's eye for pictorial composition is his unerring taste in color. The garish, howling hints of the spectrum have little place on his palette. The setting of "Three Godfathers"—the desert and frontier towns—give him opportunity to linger long on sandstorms, sunlight and twilight. He places his actors so that they become dark silhouettes on a canvas of color. He is daringly leisured, a fault arising from his greatest gift.

This, then, is Ford's style in telling a story. Kyne's yarn about lawbreakers who adopt a babe and see in themselves a parallel to the Biblical story of the wisemen, is worthy screen material, but the combination of Ford's habitually leisurely style and the script-writers' entrancement by the obvious do not result in a completely satisfactory picture. Since this local showing is months in advance of its national release, it's possible that the film may benefit from further editing.

John Wayne, who is one of Ford's favorite actors, is fine as always as the only one of the godfathers to come out from the sands alive. Pedro Armendariz, that forceful Mexican actor, suffers from the writers' insistence that because he's playing a "Mex," he's subtly inferior to the two American godfathers. This customary cliche, and Richard Hageman's overlush score, detract from the spirit Ford has sought to instill in his work.

The film is dedicated to the late Harry Carey, whose son and namesake completes the title trio. Mae Marsh, of the silent days, has a sympathetic role as the sheriff's wife, and Mildred Natwick plays the dying mother. For tradition's sake, there's a trite hint of romance at the end between Wayne and Dorothy Ford.

So "Three Godfathers" is a film for the eye, not the ear.

"THREE GODFATHERS," an Argosy Picture released by M-G-M, produced by Merian C. Cooper, directed by John Ford, screenplay by Laurence Stallings and Frank S. Nugent from the story by Peter B. Kyne. Music by Richard Hageman. At the Capitol.

GENE SHELDON, that amiable pantomimist, headlines the Capitol's stage bill, a comic whose gifted timing is always an amusing pleasure. When it comes to the Nation's comedians, here is one of the most reliable if least touted of them all. The faithful Loretta Fischer is on hand to play straight to Gene's inanities, and for a more efficient stooge a pantomimist couldn't hope. Hats off, then, to this still refreshing act . . . Helene and Howard offer their energetic humors in dance. Lester Cole and a quartet of ladies illustrate the vogue of accompanying vocals with trills, "ah-ah-ah-ah" and Jack Pa[illegible] able juggler, provides [illegible] uses for candy boxes.

KAY DEWITT . . though scheduled for this week at the Capitol, is off the bill because her warm-hearted vocals hardly fit the zany overture worked out by Sam Jack Kaufman's two-hour investigation of the Congressional Library's material on Indians. I did not, alas, find the band's essay on Indians and Thanksgiving the least amusing, a feeling that rises to downright resentment since it forces the happy tones of Miss DeWitt into unwelcome silence. There ought to be a law about keeping Miss Kay on the bill no matter what.

NOEL COWARD'S "Hay Fever" will be repeated tonight at 8:30 as the first offering of a new theater group in Rockville . . . This company calls itself the Rockville Little Theater and will be playing the comedy in the Parish Hall of Christ Church on South Washington st. Chuck Dulane of WGAY (Charlie Dronenburg), Lucinda Hamilton, Marjorie MacKey, Margaret Eddy, Alexandria Prescott, Bucey Prescott, Nancy Gude, E. Brown and Margaret Slater are in Director Pamela Bairsto's cast.

"THREE GODFATHERS" and their charge—Harry Carey, jr., Pedro Armendariz and John Wayne, in the wastes of the desert, ponder how to care for a newborn baby whose mother died in giving him birth. The scene is from Director John Ford's new Technicolor film, now having its "world premiere" on the Capitol screen

Tribesmen Object to Chief's Wife

Serowe, Bechuanaland, Nov. 24. (By Mail), (AP).—The chief of the Bamangwato tribesmen has been told by neighbor chieftains that his people still want him as their ruler—but not with his white wife at his side.

Seretse Khama, the 27-year-old chief who was to take over the reins of his tribe next year, had left the issue up to the people. His bride, Ruth Williams, 24, is waiting in London to hear the result.

The young African's uncle, Chief Tshekedi, now is ruling over his 100,000 people as regent. Seretse went to London earlier this year to study law, met Miss Williams, and married her.

Three old chiefs from outside the tribe were called in to argue with the young ruler.

Seretse replied that he loved his people and wants to be their chief—but with his wife beside him.

The Bamangwato is one of the three important tribes in the British South African protectorate of Bechuanaland.

Jessel Gives Truman Song Written for Him

Actor-Singer George Jessel yesterday presented President Truman with a copy of his latest song, "Let's Get Behind the President."

Jessel said he wrote the song especially for Mr. Truman and will sing it for the first time in public at a Democratic rally in Los Angeles on December 6.

He was accompanied to the White House by Jerilynn, his 7-year-old daughter.

New Venezuela Regime Mops Up

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 26 (U.P.). The provisional government set up yesterday after a successful army coup moved today to mop up the last remnants of opposition.

Six clandestine radio stations broadcasting what military authorities branded "false rumors" were located and their staffs arrested.

Caches or arms and home-made bombs were reported seized at the headquarters of the deposed Democratic Action Party and at several private homes.

The provisional government acted under special powers assumed when it suspended constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech, travel, public assembly, individual security and inviolability of home and mail. This amounted to virtual martial law throughout Venezuela.

Envoy's Resignation Sent to Venezuela

By The Associated Press

Venezuelan Ambassador Gonzalo Carnevali said last night he has presented his resignation to the revolutionary government now in power in his country.

He said he did so "to avoid wrong interpretations on the dignity of his position here."

"But I will remain as Ambassador," he continued, "until my successor is named which cannot be done while the government of Romulo Gallegos, which is the constitutional government of Venezuela, is the only one recognized by the United States."

There has been no word yet from the State Department on recognizing the Venezuelan revolutionary regime.

2 Die as Ship Sinks

Honolulu, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—The Navy reported today that the 171-foot ship Santa Maria, a former million-dollar luxury yacht, capsized and sank 600 miles northeast of Guam yesterday, killing two crew members. The Navy transport President Jackson picked up 14 survivors.

Not Like Others

Has No Diary, Jesse Jones Tells Court

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce in President Roosevelt's Cabinet, said in Federal Court today that he never kept a diary while in the Cabinet.

"I kept no diary," the former head of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. said, "because I didn't plan to write a book like Mr. Morgenthau (former Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr.) and some others, and I kept no dictaphones in my desk—I'd like to put that in, too."

Jones appeared as a witness in a six-million-dollar suit by James A. Moffett, former Federal Housing Administrator, against the Arabian-American Oil Co. Moffett claimed the amount was due for services, which he said led the British government to lend 10 million dollars to King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia.

Jones said his memory was vague about whether the question of financial aid to Saudi Arabia was mentioned by him to British representatives then negotiating with him in 1941 for a substantial collateral loan.

Nolan Pleads Guilty to Murder Charge; Sentence Held Up Pending Probation Report

James Thomas Nolan, 25, of 1021 N. Taylor st., Arlington, pleaded guilty in Fauquier County Circuit Court at Warrenton, Va., yesterday to the murder of Belmont Woodridge, 44, of 803 N Wayne st., Arlington.

Nolan also pleaded guilty to stealing Woodridge's automobile after shooting him five times last Armistice Day at a wooded spot along Route 690, about 5 miles northwest of Warrenton. Judge J. R. H. Alexander withheld sentence pending a report from William E. Tyler, jr., Leesburg probation officer.

Nolan was a delivery truck driver for the Progressive Cleaners, 2727 Wilson blvd., Arlington, when he disappeared the day of the murder with $20 given him to make change and about $400 from his employers' strongbox. Woodridge, a bachelor and Yale graduate was a salesman of funeral hearses and limousines for Sayles & Scoville Co., Cincinnati.. Nolan lured Woodridge into a projected trip to Cincinnati supposedly to close a deal there for the purchase of two $8000 limousines.

Nolan later confessed that outside of Warrenton he killed Woodridge, hid the body in a woods, returned to Arlington and with Woodridge's keys robbed his apartment of $1900 in war savings bonds. He started West again. At Romney, W. Va., four days after the slaying, he was stopped by police who had received word he was wanted in the cleaning establishment theft.

Woodridge had not yet been reported missing, but his driver's license and other papers, found in Nolan's possession, led to further investigation and Nolan finally confessed the whole story, according to Arlington Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard.

CBS to Get Program Of Jack Benny Jan. 2

New York, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—The Columbia Broadcasting System, which lost some of its top talent to the National Broadcasting Co. a year ago, announced today that Jack Benny, one of NBC's top comedians for the past 17 years, will transfer his Sunday night program to CBS on January 2.

CBS and NBC have been battling for Benny's program for some weeks. Some sources put the CBS purchase price at four million dollars.

Farmer Dies From Kick of Work Horse

A 50-year-old county farmer died in Prince Georges Hospital early yesterday of injuries apparently suffered when he was kicked in the head by a horse.

Helmet H. Kuenne, according to police, was fatally injured around 6 p. m. Thursday after he had gone to feed several horses in a barn on a farm he operated with his brother, Raymond, at Central ave. and Bright Seat rd., near Capitol Heights. He died at 1:30 a. m.

The brother told police he went out to look for Kuenne when he failed to return after saying he was going to feed the horses. He said the barking of a dog led him to the barn, where he found his brother lying in a stall alongside a work horse, his head battered.

Kuenne, who had no telephone in his home, said he ran nearly a quarter of a mile to a nearby store, where he telephoned the District Heights ambulance.

A verdict of accidental death was issued by Dr. J. T. Maloney, medical examiner for Prince Georges County.

Florists Ask Ban on Vendor At Hospital

The Northern Virginia Florists Association, Inc., yesterday sought an injunction in Arlington Circuit Court to halt the self-service sale of flowers in Arlington Hospital by a Washington florist.

Named as codefendents in the bill of complaint were the hospital, its administrator, John J. Anderson, and W. V. Steddom and his business, Steddom Flowers, Inc., 2900 14th st. nw.

The association, which its attorney, John Paul Jones, said was formed to establish uniform trade practices and to promote the welfare of its members, asked for a temporary restraining order to stop the business immediately and for a permanent injunction after the case has been heard.

Center of the controversy is a refrigerator in the hospital lobby, where visitors can purchase cut flowers for patients. The florists' association complains that because of Steddom's special arrangement with the hospital he can undersell them, and that in addition the operation is illegal.

Specifically, the bill of complaint alleges that:

1. Steddom pays no rent, has his electricity provided free. This means he can undersell other florists and makes for unfair competition.

2. The hospital violates its nonprofit charter by receiving 20 per cent of the proceeds, and thus taking part in a profit-making business.

3. Steddom, a Washington businessman, pays no Virginia taxes on the hospital stand.

4. To conduct such a business in the residential neighborhood where the hospital is situated is a violation of the county zoning ordinance.

5. Steddom is operating without an occupancy permit from the County Planning Commission, although he took out his business license two months ago.

H. Bruce Green, county clerk, said the case would probably be set for hearing at the court term beginning December 20.

Union Not Behind Conroy Apology

The local firemen's union yesterday emphasized that Capt. Joseph W. Conroy in no way represented the union when he apologized recently to Fire Chief Clement Murphy.

Conroy's charges last year that Murphy had demoralized the Fire Department led to the summoning of Murphy before a trial board which completely exonerated the fire chief, last January.

Conroy publicly apologized to Murphy November 19 before John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners.

A resolution adopted yesterday by the board of directors of Local 36, International Association of Firefighters (AFL) alluded to the apology and stated "Captain Conroy is no longer qualified to speak for the firemen's association."

The resolution noted that Conroy, who was local president when he made his charges against Murphy, was defeated for reelection last May and one month later withdrew as a member of the union.

Conroy, when informed of the union's resolution by a reporter, said "my apology was a purely individual act."

"When I was called before the Commissioners I was held responsible (for chares against Murphy) as an officer in the Fire Department, and when I apologized I did so as an officer."

"I didn't intend to create any impression I represented the local's opinion in any way when I apologized," Conroy added.

In July, the union went on record as demanding that Murphy be stripped of his power to name top-rank fire officers without competitive examination. In September the union decided to retain special counsel to fight grievances of association members.

Chicago U. Seeks Better Ethnic Group Relations

Prisoner Who Won Moment Of Freedom Returned to Jail

A former Washingtonian, whose legal studies while a prisoner in the Maryland House of Correction enabled him to gain temporary freedom last month, was returned there yesterday following his second conviction on four robbery charges.

Melvin Leroy Shatzer, 24, was sentenced by Judge Charles Marbury in Prince Georges County Circuit Court to serve six years and nine months on the four charges, after the court overruled his attorney's plea for dismissal on the ground of double jeopardy.

Shatzer, who first was sentenced to serve nine years after pleading guilty to the robbery charges in 1945, was free from the House of Correction last month when he filed a writ of habeas corpus with the Maryland Court of Appeals, contending he had been convicted without a formal indictment, contrary to law. Prince Georges County authorities, however, were "tipped off" that he had appealed, and submitted his case to the October grand jury in time to rearrest him as he walked out of the prison. He was held in the Prince Georges County jail pending court hearing.

His motion for dismissal because of double jeopardy was overruled by the court yesterday, on the ground that his earlier plea of guilty did not constitute a previous trial.

After hearing testimony about how Shatzer had studied law books while in prison and then had used his knowledge to gain his freedom, Judge Marbury termed his case "appealing," but said he could not ignore the defendant's past record. Shatzer has already spent about seven years in prison for various offenses.

Catholic Blast At Court Attacked

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—A statement of Roman Catholic bishops criticizing a United States Supreme Court decision has been attacked by a Baptist church leader as "apparently a propaganda document of the worst kind."

The Rev. Dr. Stanley I. Stuber, chairman of the commission on religious freedom of the Baptist World Alliance, issued a statement opposing the views of the Catholic bishops, but explained his was "a personal opinion and not official action."

The bishops' statement had been highly critical of a Supreme Court ruling that religious instruction in public schools is unconstitutional.

Dr. Stuber, who also is director of public relations of the Northern Baptist convention, said that "to accuse the Supreme Court of the United States as ruling in favor of an 'omnipotent state' is a dangerous procedure.

"It comes near to being subversive doctrine. There are so many misleading statements in the pronouncement (of the bishops) that it warrants a close examination to determine its real underlying nature.

"One has only to read the document twice to reach the conclusion that the bishops, instead of building up a case against secularism in education are, in fact, laying the ground for public support of their own parochial school system. They obviously want to use tax money to support sectarian religion."

Dr. Stuber said the eight Supreme Court justices who supported the majority ruling, "instead of opposing religion, set it free from the bonds of the state.

"They especially stated that their ruling was not against religion, but against the violation of the constitutional principle of the separation of church and state.

"Few will oppose the bishops' insistence upon religion in our national life. We do need more true religion in all phases of life. But this does not mean that we should turn our public schools over to the church."

Bible Reading Call Extended in D. C.

Daily reading of the Bible during the period from Thanksgiving to Christmas has been urged by the American Bible Society which is sponsoring the fifth annual worldwide Bible reading program.

The society has passed out bookmarks and other literature with suggested daily selections. It urges readers to set aside a regular period for reading the Bible, and suggests memorization of at least one verse daily.

Outside the United States, the program is under the direction of the Bible Society's 12 foreign agencies. Thirty four countries participated in the program last year.

The following readings have been suggested for the coming week: Sunday, Psalm 23; Monday, Ephesians 6; Tuesday, Philippians 4; Wednesday, John 17; Thursday, Revelation 21; Friday, Psalms, 121; Saturday, Psalms 27.

Readings for December 5-11 are: Acts 17, John 15, Hebrews 11, Romans 12, John 3, Romans 8, John 14.

December 12-18: Matthew 13, Luke 14, Luke 15, Luke 16, I Corinthians 13, Isaiah 55, John 1.

December 19-25; Mark 4; Matthew 5, Matthew 6, Matthew 7, Isaiah 2:1-5, 9:1-7; Isaiah 11:1-9, 40:1-11; and Christmas Day, Matthew 2.

Services Sunday will mark the first Sunday in Advent. Advent is the season in the church year that includes the four Sundays before Christmas.

It is a time for prayers and special events leading up to the celebration of the anniversary of the birth of Christ. Many pastors have planned sermon series for the four weeks.

At Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, Maple and Tulip aves., Dr. R. Paul Schearer will begin a series on "Let Us Now Go Even Unto Bethlehem and See" at 11 a. m. Sunday. Individual sermon topics are: November 28, "The Troubler;" December 5, "The Savior;" December 12, "The Revealer;" December 19, "The King," and December 26, "Back From Bethlehem."

Sunday at 6 p. m. the first of an Advent series of vesper services will be held at the First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw. At 11 a. m. Dr. Carl Heath Kopf, pastor of the church, will deliver an Advent sermon entitled "Make Ready."

The congregation of Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut ave and Jocelyn st. nw. will mark the first Sunday in Advent at 11 a. m., when the Rev. C. Stanley Lowell speaks on "This World Under God."

A series on "Scenes from the Christmas Drama" will be given by Dr. Stephen Gill Spottswood at John Wesley A. M. E. Zion Church, 14th and Corcoran sts. nw. beginning at 11 a. m. Episcopalians Plan Worldwide Male Communion

Washington Episcopal Churches will join in a world-wide corporate communion for men and boys on Sunday.

The first Sunday in Advent has been set aside for the service for a number of years. Breakfasts following the services have been planned at a number of the churches.

The Rev. W. Lloyd Goodrich of St. Matthew's Church, Seat Pleasant, will celebrate the communion service at 7 a. m. and has invited men and boys in the church to breakfast in the rectory afterward. Breakfast also will follow the service at St. Stephen and the Incarnation Church, 1527 Newton st. nw. The Rev. Stuart F. Gast, rector, will celebrate the communion at 8 a. m.

Police Mail Applications For New Corps

Applications were in the mail yesterday for the first group of men to seek membership in the newly authorized emergency police reserve corps.

The mimeographed applications to be filled out by those interested in the civilian corps—which is to have a starting nucleus of 200 men—were mailed yesterday by the Police Department's training division under direction of Inspector Walter T. Storm.

Storm and Inspector Floyd A. Truscott yesterday conferred with Civil Service Commission officials on two other recently approved means of bolstering police strength here—lowered physical requirements and authorization to enlist 80 more policewomen.

When the District Commissioners approved the emergency reserve corps last week, they also reduced the height minimum for policemen to 5 feet 7 inches, and increased the age limit from 31 to 33.

The two police officials said no definite decision was made on any new recruitment plans, adding that further meetings with Civil Service will be necessary to work out details.

It was indicated earlier that the first source of the 80 policewomen—who will act as assistant station clerks to relieve men for more active duty—will be the junior professional registers of Civil Service.

Va. Council of Churches Names Rev. Miller Aide

Richmond, Va., Nov. 26 (AP).—The Virginia Council of Churches today named the Rev. Minor C. Miller of Bridgewater acting executive secretary to succeed the Rev. Henry Lee Robison, who resigned.

Miller, director of the council's department of Christian education and associate executive secretary, was named to serve in the interim until the full council meets in January. At that time he will be nominated by the executive committee for the permanent office.

Miller, a native of Augusta County, had been executive director of the Virginia Council of Religious Education and at one time was executive secretary of the Virginia School Association.

Murray, Other CIO Officers Reelected by Acclamation

Portland, Oreg., Nov. 26 (AP).—Parading, cheering CIO delegates today reelected as president a stern Philip Murray who asserted he would never "permit communistic infiltration into the national CIO."

Gone was Murray's former peacemaking role as the 600-odd delegates would up their annual convention by reelecting all officers by acclamation. For Murray, it is the start of his ninth year.

Murray warned the Communists that remain in the CIO to "cease and desist" their communistic propaganda. He then appealed to all CIO unions to take care of any violators.

The final day of the week-long convention also saw Murray make a friendly gesture toward the AFL. He reiterated his invitation to the AFL to confer on economic and political problems, but this time in conciliatory terms without any of the sarcasm that sometimes accompanied previous invitations. It was clear, though, that he was not accepting an AFL invitation to merge.

Bitter Fight Over Reds

It was the end of a precedent-breaking convention. For the first time in many years a bitter floor fight broke out over CIO policies and Communists. The fight raged daily—until today's session, which was all cheers and applause.

It was not quite unity, for a small minority—less than 10 per cent of the delegates—refused to take part in the longest ovation ever given Murray. It was a 39-minute demonstration with chanting, singing delegates parading about the convention hall, throwing confetti, waving flags and clapping hands.

Murray also announced he intended to push at once an intensive organizing campaign, similar to that of the mid-1930's when the CIO was born.

"I charge all of you to engage in the mightiest organization crusade that has ever been undertaken in this country," he told delegates.

Murray will go into the campaign armed with authority from the delegates to take "proper action when nececsary" against unions which have failed to grow. These include several left-wing unions, the particular target of Murray and the convention.

May Come Up Today

An executive board meeting has been called for Saturday, and the issue might come up then.

The right wing, strongly in majority, gave the long ovations to others reelected. Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey got the longest—13 minutes. Albert J Fitzgerald, one of the nine vice presidents, got the shortest—one minute.

Fitzgerald is head of the United Electrical Workers Union, which has been accused of being Communist-dominated. Fitzgerald also bolted CIO policy to support Henry Wallace in the last campaign.

Murray also pledged support to President Truman's legislative program and called for extension of collective bargaining to secure "social insurance and pension schemes designed to protect all workers."

"Invites Cooperation"

"We invite the cooperation of the little businessman, farmers, churches, the AFL and other unions to join with us in this common cause—the cause of the President of the United States and the cause of the CIO," he said.

Vice presidents reelected were: L. S. Buckmaster, president of the Rubber Workers; Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union; Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the United Electrical Workers; John Green, president of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers; Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization; O. A. Knight, president of the Oil Workers; Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers; Walter Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers; Frank Rosenblum, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Citizens Block Postal Change In Md. Area

A proposal to change postal service in 14 communities near Bladensburg, Md., has been abandoned by the Postoffice Department.

The department yesterday announced its decision to leave service in the area intact following its review of testimony at a recent hearing, when more than a dozen persons spoke in opposition to a plan to have the Bladensburg postoffice, instead of the Hyattsville office, serve the area.

First Assistant Postmaster General Vincent C. Burke said citizens expressed fear that service from the second-class Bladensburg postoffice would not be as efficient as that now rendered by Hyattsville, a first-class station. He said all of the communities had protested, and many had been represented by their mayors and town councilmen.

Postoffice officials said about 10,000 persons would have been affected by the change in jurisdiction. A citizens committee, headed by Brendan O'Dwyer of Landover Hills and Mrs. Betty Tayman of Cheverly, fought the move.

Reception to Be Held

A reception for the Rev. Charles W. Wood, rector of St. Paul's Church, Rock Creek Parish, will be given by the vestry of the church at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday. A short musical program and dancing will be included in the program.

In Arlington

Court Named For Election Suit Trial

The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals yesterday set up a three-judge court to hear a suit asking for a recount of the ballots cast in Arlington's county board election November 2.

Named to the court in addition to Arlington's Circuit Judge Walter T. McCarthy, were Judge Harold F. Snead of the Circuit Court of Richmond city, and Judge Richard T. Wilson of the Hustings Court of Petersburg. No date has been set to hear the case.

The suit was brought by 20 Arlington residents, who allege "an improper count of votes" in the election contest between Democratic incumbent Alfred E. Frisbie and Independent Lee Potter. Frisbie was reported winner by 129 votes out of about 20,000 cast.

The suit alleged errors in recording votes in 8 of Arlington's 24 precincts, and declared that the commissioners of election, who reviewed precinct findings, made "a substantial error" in recording the official total vote.

'Remember 1946' Motto for Army and Navy Today

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—For the 793 young gentlemen of the Naval Academy's graduating class who, come June Week, will fling their caps high in the air and thereby make the newsreels happy again, tomorrow's Army-Navy game is of special importance. Like last year's graduates, they've never seen a Navy team beat Army, but at least they have one more shot a that eye-filling sight.

POVICH

Not since 1943, when another supposedly inferior Navy team moved up to West Point, the wartime site, and slapped down the Army squad, 13-0, have the Midshipmen won an Army game. Army's star is in high ascendancy and the Cadets are threatening to match their previous eight-year winning streak over Navy that ended in 1932. The Cadets will graduate only three men of their two-platoon system that has lifted them to unbeaten status this year.

Halfback Jack Stuart will be Army's only serious loss by graduation, and Coach Earl Blaik will have seasoned teams to toss at Navy the next three years. The fact that they also have Blaik going for them also is apparently no mean asset. Army's football fortunes were supposed to slump after Blaik lost Blanchard and Davis. Two years later Army has a team that is rated perhaps as better than the B-D outfits.

NAVY DOESN'T LIKE the present state of affairs and unblushingly admits it is stepping up efforts to get some better football players into Annapolis. There's apparently no high crime in that. Football players get no special consideration except with respect to their original appointments which are made available. But they have to meet the same scholastic requirements as the 125-pound kid around the corner with ambitions to be a naval officer.

Capt. Tom Hamilton, Navy's athletic director, takes pride in graduating midshipmen who were football players and cites the long list of former football stars who distinguished themselves in the last war. Football training is akin to battle training, he holds, and he made football the major sport of his vast Pre-Flight schools when the Navy was in a frenzy to graduate fast-thinking, hard-hitting combat pilots.

Navy has had it tougher than Army in getting the good prep school stars in, though. There's enough difference in the demand for credits by the two schools, particularly in physics and the languages, to make West Point more attractive to the boy eager to play football. The big shot high school stars too often are too impatient to spend another year in prep school qualifying for admission to Annapolis.

A LITTLE LADY from Texas will be the guest of the Naval Academy Athletic Association at tomorrow's game with a seat of honor on the sidelines, albeit in a wheel chair. Mrs. Randlett Lawrence of Monthalia, Tex., was without a ticket until Navy learned, through the intercession of Army friends, incidentally, that she had a special rooting interest.

She's the widow of an Army colonel and the mother of an Army lieutenant but more specifically she's the mother of Tex Lawrence, Navy's regular center. Tex is playing his last game for Annapolis and she has never seen him play football, didn't want to miss this final chance. She flew in from Texas, and a special Navy escort will take her to her appointed place in the stadium.

That isn't the whole story, though. You see, Mrs. Lawrence has never walked since she was 5 years old and was struck down by polio. Tex is her second boy to play football for the Naval Academy. Renn Lawrence was a Navy fullback before graduating in 1945, and unlike Tex, played on Navy teams that did beat Army.

THIS REMARKABLE LADY is of a remarkable service family. Her first husband, an Air Corps officer, went to his death in an airplane mishap in the First World War. Remarrying after that tragedy, she was again a service bride, wife of the chief of staff of the Tenth Armored Division. Again tragedy struck and she was widowed for the second time when Maj. Gen. Renn Lawrence hurtled to his death in a 1944 plane accident.

Shortly after his graduation from Annapolis, her oldest boy, Renn, resigned his commission in the Navy. It wasn't difficult. He wanted to follow his father's career as an armored division officer. An Army commission was quickly forthcoming and he is now a lieutenant stationed at Fort Knox, top base of the armored forces.

Her boy Tex is one of the Naval Academy's nicest kids, now filling the shoes of All-American Center Dick Scott, and a high favorite with his teammates. The Navy needed no special incentive for tomorrow's game, but you know darn well they'd like to win this one for, among other things, Tex's mom.

Today is a big day for the 10 winners of The Washington Post's Pick-The-Winners football contests of this season. This morning they will go to Philadelphia to attend the Army-Navy game, accompanied by their guests, on an all-expense-paid trip.

Both Teams Point Out That 21-18 Near Upset

Philadelphia, Nov. 26 (AP).—A Navy football team without a victory came to town today for its annual clash with Army and discovered it had friends—thousands of them.

Tomorrow's game will be the forty-ninth time the two service teams have met on the gridiron. And seldom in those years have the two met with the odds so much in favor of one team as they are this time for unbeaten Army.

Yet here in Philadelphia, where the Cadets trimmed Pennsylvania and the Middies lost to the Quakers, there is a strong feeling that Navy is capable of an upset.

It is not a box-office inspired hunch. These Philadelphians actually believe it. Every one of the 102,000 tickets was disposed of weeks ago, including the three for President and Mrs. Truman and their daughter, Margaret.

This is probably the only game in which both teams are using the same slogan. It is "Remember 1946." Two years ago a similarly unbeaten Cadet aggregation, with the famed Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis in the line-up, were scared to death by an underdog Navy outfit that lost 21 to 18, but was only 4 yards away from another touchdown when time ran out.

Both teams worked out on the Municipal Stadium turf this afternoon.

Mild Weather Predicted

The players found the turf to their liking.

They will return just before tomorrow's 1:30 p. m. (EST) kickoff when the stadium's seats will be filled. Among the spectators will be the top brass of both services, including the President and members of his Cabinet, Senators, generals and admirals.

The weather man promises to smile on the game. He has predicted occasional light rains late tonight or Saturday with cloudy and mild temperatures prevailing by kickoff time.

The esteem in which the Middies, who haven't won a game since opening their 1947 campaign, are held by Philadelphians is in direct contrast to that of the betting gentry. The latter holds that the Cadets will win by 21 points—the exact margin by which Army won last year. The 1947 tally was 21-0. That was the Cadets' twenty-sixth victory in the series that started in 1890. Navy has won 20 but hasn't been able to triumph since 1943. Three games in the past ended in ties.

The late enthusiasm for Navy is centered around the Middie line, which has been whacked by the best teams in the country for eight straight Saturdays. It never was disgraced although the Sailors didn't win a game.

Now Bill Hawkins has returned as fullback to bolster the Navy attack. He has been out almost a

Sugar Bowl Selects Its Teams Tonight

New Orleans, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Sugar Bowl opponents will be announced tomorrow about 8:30 p. m. (CST) a bowl official said today.

Fred Digby, executive manager of the Mid-winter Sports Association, sponsor of the January 1 football game, made the announcement this afternoon.

This could indicate that the bowl committee was considering a Southeastern Conference team.

The conference has a rule barring member teams from entering a bowl agreement, actual or implied, until 8 p. m. (CST) the Saturday after Thanksgiving. Sugar Bowl officials have said previously that they would abide by all rules and regulations.

However, it could also mean that the Sugar Bowl officials were awaiting the result of other games being played by teams not in the SEC but mentioned frequently in speculation.

These include North Carolina, which closes its season tomorrow against Virginia, and Oklahoma University which meets Oklahoma A. and M.

Earlier in the day, the Dallas Times Herald said it had learned from an authoritative source that North Carolina would not play in the Cotton Bowl.

The paper said it got the information from a source at Chapel Hill, N. C., which said North Carolina is hoping for a bid to the Sugar Bowl and that its opponent probably will be Tulane.

Dan Rogers, chairman of the selection committee of the Cotton Bowl, said an announcement as to the team that will meet Southern Methodist in the Cotton Bowl will probably be made late Saturday afternoon.

[Dr. George L. Cross, president of the University of Oklahoma, said today that he "doubts" if Oklahoma will accept its bid to the Orange Bowl. He intimated that a Cotton Bowl invitation would be welcome.

["We have had only one invitation to play in a New Year's Day bowl game and that was from the Orange Bowl," Dr. Cross told the United Press in a telephone interview from Norman, Okla., "and I doubt if we shall accept that—but, of course, it's still up to the boys on the team."

[The university president said that no bowl decisions would be made until after tomorrow's game with Oklahoma A. and M., Bowl and Cotton Bowl officials, appear to have a romp against Virginia at Charlottesville.

Southern Methodist, already named host team in the Cotton Bowl, faces an old nemesis in Texas Christian at Dallas.

Oklahoma's galloping Sooners, already champions of the Big Seven and apparently bound for a January 1 appearance either in the Sugar Bowl or the Orange Bowl at Miami — probably the latter—are solid favorites to plant the Oklahoma Aggies at Stillwater.

Michigan, acclaimed the Nation's No. 1 team in the Associated Press poll of sports writers, finished up last week, but Notre Dame, the undefeated No. 2, has a Saturday date with the Washington Huskies at South Bend.

Barons Hand Lions 5th Loss In Row, 8 to 1

The Cleveland Barons, beaten often since their long winning streak had been snapped, were still invincible to the Washington Lions, who succumbed 8-1 to the Barons last night before a crowd of 2560. It was the Lions fifth loss in a row.

The Barons, building up a comfortable margin in the first period, and slowing down in the second when the game got rough, resumed their scoring practice in the last period with three goals. The last of the three was tapped in by Bob Carse, while Lion Goalie Paul Gauthier was out behind his net wrestling John Holota, the Barons' center.

Carse' goal, incidentally was the only one of the Barons' eight, which was scored by the first line.

Washington's recent acquisition, Len Mutcheson, broke loose several times in the first period but could never find the goal when it counted. One of those wild shots, however, was deflected accurately by Harry Frost to save the Lions from a shutout.

Cleveland piled up a 5-1 lead in the first two periods on pin point shooting by its second and third string lines.

DeMarco and Church Russell, the second and third string centers were four-fifths of the Baron punch in these two periods. Russell was particularly dazzling as he twice shot the puck through minute openings left by Lion Goalie Gauthier.

Phil Vitale resumed his favorite pastime of dumping opposing forwards in the second period and was sent out for interference. Vitale tried again late in the period against Russell, who was silly enough to reciprocate by tripping his tormenter. Vitale got up, draped himself around Russell's neck, gloves went flying and both were measuring each other when teammates intervened.

Washington		Cleveland
Gauthier	Goal	Bower
Wilson	L. D.	Allen
Vitale	R. D.	Wares
McAtee	Center	Holota
Frost	L. W.	Leswick
Mutcheson	R. W.	Carse

First-period scoring: (1) Cleveland—Demarco (Bolinger and Davidson), 4:21. (2) Cleveland—Russell (Wycherly and Buller), 8:03. (3) Cleveland—Kelly (Demarco), 12:03. (4) Washington—Frost (Mutcheson, McAtee), 16:35. (5) Cleveland—Demarco (Kelly, Davidson), 19:56.

Second-period scoring: (6) Cleveland—Russell (Wycherly), 10:15. Penalties—Vitale (interference), Vitale (roughing), Russell (roughing).

Third period: 7, Cleveland, Wares (Leswick), 10:23; 2, Cleveland, Buller (Wycherly, Russell), 13:00; 9, Cleveland, Carse (Leswick, Holota), 18:17. Penalty—Dick (hooking).

Oregon Coach Flying To Talk Cotton Bowl

Los Angeles, Nov. 26 (AP).—Head Football Coach Jim Aiken of the University of Oregon is flying to Dallas tonight apparently to discuss his team's possible appearance in the Cotton Bowl game there New Year's Day.

Aiken would arrive in Dallas tomorrow in time to scout Southern Methodist University's Southwest conference game with Texas Christian. SMU is assured of being the host team in the Cotton Bowl.

The Portland Oregonian said the Webfoots will be Southern Methodist's opponent, provided permission is received from Pacific Coast Conference officials.

The paper quoted Larry Wolfe, Oregon football enthusiast who made a special trip to Dallas, as saying: "It's all set. The players have voted to invite Oregon and the bid has been officially dispatched."

Bowl Bids Ride on Final Games Today

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—With scattered Thanksgiving Day contests out of the way, the '48 college football campaign reaches a rousing conclusion tomorrow, headlined by the annual Army-Navy classic at Philadelphia.

Though nothing will be at stake except Army's glittering record, the service clas will attract the day's greatest crowd—something like 100,000, including President Truman and three miles of gold braid. In other games:

From the standpoint of uncertainty of the result and richness of the prize at stake, a battle at Athens between Georgia Tech and Georgia probably is the day's outstanding event. Georgia, unbeaten in the Southeastern Conference, has a good chance for a bid to the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans if it can overcome the Engineers.

The North Carolina Tar Heels, who trimmed Georgia in an early season game and are said to be regarded with favor both by Sugar

Pitt Meets Monday, May Name Hamilton

By Duke Moran

Pittsburgh, Nov. 26 (AP).—Pitt may spike its football purism with some punch.

That's the way most grid experts look on the Panthers' efforts to obtain a new athletic director. The new man would take over in time for varsity matriculation of the best Panther frosh squad in years.

The 1948 varsity record of six wins and three losses, including a stunning upset of Penn State, was the finest in a decade.

Navy Capt. Tom Hamilton reportedly has the inside track for the athletic directorship. The first step toward deciding this will be taken Monday at a meeting of the Pitt athletic committee and the university's undergraduate deans.

Hamilton now functions in a similar post at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. Pitt Chancellor Rufus H. Fitzgerald in announcing Monday's meeting said Hamilton "and others" will be considered for the Pitt post.

Brown's Name Absent

Reports have it that the others include Harvey Harman of Rutgers; Jack (Spike) Harding of Miami U., Fla.; Wes Fesler of Ohio State, and Lloyd Jordan of Amherst. All but Fesler and Hamilton are Pitt alumni.

Fesler reportedly has rejected Pitt overtures.

Hamilton would be the first non-Pitt man at the helm if he is named. The present acting athletic director is Frank Carver, Pitt publicity man who is satisfied with that job.

But neither Hamilton nor anybody else mentioned is liable to walk deliberately into such a heavy firing line as the Pitt job unless he has some assurance that future Panther elevens will be less helpless against first class opposition.

Hamilton's most recent tour of duty at the Naval Academy has been something less than sensational from a victory standpoint. But he hasn't had to withstand verbal broadsides from irate alumni—official and otherwise.

That sort of fi ing ultimately led to the resignation of James Hagan as Pitt athletic director last summer after 10 stormy years. Before Hagan's resignation the fog of war enveloped everybody at Pitt with various committees laying down edicts of blame like barrages. One group wanted Hagan fired. Another levelled off at Coach Walter (Mike) Milligan, who still has another year to go on a three-year contract.

The Panthers' 1948 success apparently guaranteed that Milligan will work out his contract—but there is a faction at Pitt which firmly believes Mike lacks head coaching stature.

Pitt's severe bruising at the hands of "Big Nine" opposition, climaxed by a 69-0 pasting by Michigan last year in a season which brought only one Pitt victory in eight tries, led to the explosion which blew Hagan out of office.

Anti-Haganites blamed Jimmy for a suicidal "woo the Big Nine for membership" policy. It's true that since Pitt deemphasized football the Panthers have stuck dogmatically to rules governing "Big Nine" eligibility.

"It's also true that since 1938 the Panthers have won only three in 26 games with the "Big Nine." Two of those came this year. The other victory in 1947 over Ohio State snapped a 23-game losing streak to the "Big Nine."

Next year Pitt plays three "Big Nine" foes—Minnesota, Ohio State and Northwestern—and maybe a fourth, Indiana.

That losing streak was a far cry from the prepurism days when Pitt was a gridiron scourge—widely criticized for its scholarship practices.

Terps Figure To Rebound At W. Virginia

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 26.—With its own bowl hopes deader than a Thanksgiving turkey, the only thing left for Maryland to do here tomorrow is to further smear the record of a West Virginia already selected for a bowl.

Like the Terps, the Mountaineers have been beaten three times this season, but unlike the Terrapins, the Mountaineers won't be idle New Year's Day. They'll be in El Paso, Tex., battling Texas Mines in the Sun Bowl.

Former Redskin Coach Dud De Groot has done a wonderful job of piloting West Virginia to seven triumphs this year, but the feeling here tonight was that the Terps would successfully come around his Mountaineers tomorrow in the regular season finale for both teams.

At least the odds-makers feel that way. They've made Maryland a 7-point favorite, obviously disregarding events of the last two weeks when the Terps were smeared by North Carolina and practically annihilated by Vanderbilt.

Only Pitt, Penn State and Virginia have taken the measure of DeGroot's Dandies who have bowled over Washington and Lee, Wooster, Western Reserve, South Carolina, Ohio University, Waynesburg and Temple.

The Mountaineer attack is built around the passing arm of Jimmy Walthan and the line plunges of

Report of Raise For Waldorf Is 'Premature'

Berkeley, Calif., Nov. 26 (AP).—Athletic Director Brutus Hamilton of the University of California said tonight a report a new and better contract had been given Football Coach Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf was "premature."

But he agreed it was a good idea and added: "Waldorf has done a good job for us and we'll take care of him when the time comes."

Hamilton said he believed the reports of a new contract, published by San Francisco afternoon newspapers, were the result of a misunderstanding of informal remarks he made recently.

"At this moment," Hamilton said tonight, "we haven't talked contract at all and there's been nothing officially. I have no authority to draw up a contract and must go to the athletic advisory board."

He indicated Waldorf probably would be given a raise but said no public announcement would be made when that is done.

Waldorf piloted the Bears this year to their first Rose Bowl appearance since 1937—they meet Northwestern at Pasadena on New Year's Day. In two seasons, his California teams have dropped but one game. This year they were unbeaten and untied in 10 games.

Navy Faithful Hit New Peak

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 26 (AP).—The Navy football squad left today for its finale with Army in Philadelphia Saturday to the tune of an unprecedented demonstration by the brigade of midshipmen.

The entire brigade lined both sides of a roadway as the squad walked from the boat house to buses. It was the first time in academy history the Middies had been excused from classes for a football sendoff.

Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., the superintendent, ordered the dismissal of classes unknown to the team or coaches. They were visibly affected by the unexpected loud reception from their more than 3000 classmates.

The demonstration climaxed a week of great enthusiasm in the face of a season which is without a Navy victory. The squad was driven relentlessly by Coach George Sauer and the players came up eager to take it out on their traditional rival.

The usual signs of defiance to the Cadets plastered the grounds and Tecumseh, the old ship's figurehead, wore his traditional battle paint. The midshipmen will toss pennies at the base of the statue for luck Saturday morning as they pass on their way to the game.

Missouri Replaces Terps in 'Gator

Columbia, Mo., Nov. 26 (AP).—The University of Missouri today accepted a bid to play in the third annual 'Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla., January 1.

The announcement was made by Prof. Sam Shirky, faculty representative, after a meeting of the university's committee on inter-collegiate athletics.

Although the opponent of the Big Seven Conference runner-up is not known, John (Hi) Simmons, assistant coach, left tonight to scout Clemson in its game tomorrow with Auburn at Mobile, Ala. Clemson had a scout watching Missouri against Nebraska last Saturday.

Last year in the 'Gator Bowl, Maryland and Georgia played a 20-20 tie.

Red Says Secret of Caps' Success No Secret; It's 4 Teams—'Rough, Smooth, Fast, Big'

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

EVEN AT THE RISK of putting the whammy on a winning club, certainly a novelty in this town, it's high time somebody talked about those slightly sensational Caps.

Red Auerbach's cutups have cut up everybody they've met in the Basketball Association of America. Tonight at Uline they'll endeavor to make Indianapolis victim No. 12.

The visiting Jets, sporting two former Georgetown players in Andy Kostecka and John Mahnken, have improved after a shaky start and boast a modest two-game winning streak. They turned back Providence, 110-107, and Boston, 81-66, in their last two outings.

Kostecka, the temperamental Russian who was dropped as Hoya captain last year after telling Elmer Ripley how to coach, is one of the Jets' scoring leaders. Mahnken's the former Cap who suddenly became a former Baltimore Bullet. Long John's played two good games for the Jets, though.

Auerbach, considered the "Young Fox" of basketball after his shrewd off-season acquisitions, explained the secret of his Caps' success yesterday.

It's hardly a secret, for the first time in three years the local squad is strong in reserves.

"I don't have five definite starters," informed the voluble red-head, who has been gleefully substituting freely. "I have what I call four teams and I classify them as rough, smooth, fast and big."

Auerbach gave unstinting praise to his new men for helping get the Caps off to their brilliant start. Kleggie Hermsen, 6-foot 9-inch center and Dick Schulz, were obtained from Baltimore; Matt Zunic, ex-GW ace played with Dow Chemical in the National League; Leo Katkaveck was captain of North Carolina State, and Jack Toomay recently was pulled away from Baltimore. Toomay, 6-foot 8-inches, played with Chicago and Providence and the Caps feel that he's the big man they need.

Last year, the Caps won only nine games in 24 on the road. At the moment, they've already taken six. If they can continue their sizzling pace, they'll smash winning streak records of 15 and 17 they set two years ago. In that, their first season, they won 27 straight at home.

Freddie Scolari calls the Caps the "damndest team I've ever played on." Said Freddie, "this club's completely relaxed and doesn't worry about a thing. The boys think it's the natural thing to come from behind."

Bones McKinney, having a great year, calls the team definitely better than last year's. "Nobody's selfish," explained Bones, "and we're all out to win. I say we have the old college spirit.

"Personally, I can't see a defeat ahead but I guess it's bound to happen."

Ban on Rocky Is World-Wide

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 26 (AP).—National Boxing Association President Abe J. Greene said today Rocky Graziano has been suspended indefinitely from boxing in all parts of the world under NBA supervision.

Greene said the action was automatic following Graziano's suspension today by the California State Boxing Commission.

Joe Genshlea, secretary of the California Boxing Commission, said action was taken as a result of Graziano's "running out" on a fight December 1 in Oakland with Fred Apostoli.

Greene said the boxer will be given a "chance to straighten the matter out" at a hearing December 18 in Los Angeles if he desires.

Opening Sunday

Speed Bursts Highlight Bike Races

AT REGULAR INTERVALS the six-day bike races which begin at 7 o'clock tomorrow night at the National Guard Armory, turn into something roughly resembling a Wild West show. Twelve teams will compete

Every hour on the hour for 10 hours of each day, it happens. Somebody shoots a gun off, and the bicycles, heretofore grinding aimlessly around, begin to stampede. After a 2-mile riot at top speed and a short breathing spell, the gun pops again, about 5 times each hour.

In all, the trigger gets pulled 50 times a day, insuring the customers at least 100 miles of flank speed cycling daily. The schedule for these sprints is from 2 through 4 in the afternoon and from 8 through 2 at night.

Pleasing the customers rates high with bike racers but there are other incentives for knocking themselves out 50 times a day.

A point system has been worked out which rewards the winners of each sprint with six points, and a proportionate number for the next three positions. On the last day of the race, point awards multiply for sprint winners. By week's end, the most number of points is a nice thing to own for a bike rider, but not necessarily the nicest thing. You can have no points at all next to your name and still win a six-day bike race, simply by stealing a lap on the rest of the field.

Stealing a lap, or "jamming," as the trade calls it, is usually attempted between sprints and during the dog hours. The ambitious thief tries to sneak around and pass everybody else on the course. When the rest of the field is disinclined, as it nearly always is, he has set himself quite a chore, and a stolen lap is therefore considered the fanciest trick in a bike race. If nobody steals a lap, the point totals determine the winners.

The racing day extends from noon to 5 the next morning. In between, the boys eat, sleep, and learn how to walk again.

Globetrotters Here Sunday

Art and athletics fuse once again in a combination floor show and basketball doubleheader tomorrow night at Uline Arena.

On the court the perennially great Harlem Globetrotters will meet the Indiana Clark Twins in one game, while the Kansas City Stars and the Philadelphia Sphas play in the other. On stage between games will be Jesse Owens, the former Olympic track star, emceeing a show which features Jacques Cagnon, a unicyclist, Doug Caryland and Hugh Cook, table tennis artists.

Clarence Brings One Horse Home

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 26.—Apprentice Benny Civitello, a Newark Del., boy who learned to ride in Mexico, stole some of the Picou thunder here today.

The young Italian-American youngster rode three winners while tahe much-publicized Clarence was held to a single success—his twenty-sixth.

Civitello's victories included the featured $3500 Cherrystone Purse. He booted Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Dr. Almac to the wire in this race. Trainer J. V. Stewart forgot to claim the apprentice allowance when Dr. Almac's entry was made. The son of Happy Argo thus was forced to carry 115 pounds.

However, Dr. Almac was so much the best he probably could have toted two boys around the track. He won by six lengths in the easiest kind of fashion. The test was a mile and sixteenth and involved six horses.

Rustle Broom Second

A crowd of 11,000 saw J. Rapsarda's Rustle Broom finish second and four lengths ahead of Brookmeade Stable's Inheritance. The last named had Apprentice Clarence Picou in the saddle.

Dr. Almac, making it two straight over this track, was heavily backed throughout the wagering and returned a $3.80 mutuel. He set his own pace and was clocked in 1:50 1-5.

Rustle Broom and Sassy's King were closest to Dr. Almac in the early stages while Picou was rating Inheritance. Sassy's King was first to falter. Rustle then made a bid but Civitello let out a notch and Dr. Almac added to his daylight advantage.

Daily Double $426.00

William Ziegler's Better Luck won the first race at $11 and there was a $426 pay-off on the daily double when Sam Fillman's ancient Chat Hopkins showed a liking for the bad going and won the second race at a $64.20 mutuel. Jockey Ray Arduini of Washington was aboard the 8-year-old.

Civitello rode his first winner on Send Off, a $34 shot owned by Mrs. Elmer Trueman of Washington. His third winner came with E. L. Miller's Blue Egret in the seventh event, the filly paying $20.20.

Picou tried hard as usual. He faced a battery of movie and magazine cameras. He had some excuses on several horses, among them Easy Homer, the favorite in the seventh. This gelding lugged in so badly, Picou had to fight him to keep him straight and was second beaten less than a length.

Utah Changes Mind Again

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 26. (U.P.).—Utah University's "now-we-re-going-now-we-aren't" football Redskins changed their minds again tonight and voted to accept a Delta Bowl bid if players' wives and children could go along, too.

That made the third time the team had reversed itself on whether to accept a possible $30,000 Delta Bowl bid. Only last night Utah rejected the invitation.

While the Navy forward wall may be its secret weapon, there is little question that the Cadet backfield is superior to anything the Navy may have in the point-making department.

The Cadets have whipped all of their eight opponents. In those tests Gil Stephenson has developed into one of the Nation's best sophomore fullbacks. With him on offense will be such veterans as Arnold Galiffa, a human skyrocket when it comes to passing from the quarterback slot; Bobby Stuart and Winfield Scott. They have never been held to less than three touchdowns in only game.

In contrast the defensive half of the Army's two-platoon team has yielded only 68 points. In losing its eight, Navy has manufactured only 56 tallies while giving up 165.

Thirty-seven special trains, 19 from New York and 18 from Washington and Baltimore, will bring an estimated 30,000 fans, most of whom will be graduates of one of the competing schools.

Dobie Gravely Ill in Hospital

Putnam, Conn., Nov. 26 (A.P.).—Gilmour (Gloomy Gil) Dobie, former football coach for Navy, Cornell and Boston College, tonight was reported gravely ill in the Institute for Living, Hartford.

Dr. David Bates of this city, Dobie's physician, said the famous retired grid mentor had been a patient at the institute, a hospital for the treatment of nervous disorders, for the last three months.

Dobie was injured critically in 1936 following a "victory dinner" for the Boston College team. He and Frank Murdock, his assistant, were injured when their car crashed into a bridge. Dobie suffered a brain concussion, a fractured jaw and deep lacerations.

4 GOP Commissioners File Suit to Block Vote on County's Charter Council

Speed Promised On 'Emergency' Litigation to Get Court Ruling Soon

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

A suit was filed in the Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville yesterday aimed at keeping the county commissioners in office until 1950, instead of replacing them with a council-manager form of government next January 10.

Among contentions of the four county commissioners bringing the suit are:

That nomination to the proposed charter council must be done by party primary instead of by petition, as the charter provides.

That if a charter council assumed office it would lead to "removal" of the commissioners, which action would conflict with a State law prohibiting charter government from removing county officers whose appointment is provided for in the State constitution.

That the "credit of the county and its ability to sell its securities will be brought into question."

Asks Vote Injunction

The suit is designed to block the charter election for county councilmen, scheduled for January 6. The suit asks that the county board of election supervisors be enjoined from conducting such an election. It was filed by F. Bernard Welsh, legal adviser to the county commissioners, on behalf of four of the five commissioners.

The four are Brooke Johns, president; Wesley I. Sauter, Oliver W. Youngblood and George C. Esworthy, all Republicans. The fifth commissioner, Charles H. Jamison, Democrat, opposes the suit. The four commisioners are plaintiffs in their capacity as members of an official body and as individual taxpayers.

The suit will be opposed by a battery of at least seven pro-charter lawyers, Col. Norman B. Ames, president of the charter committee, announced last night after a strategy meeting.

At least five charter committee attorneys will ask the court's permission to intervene and assist the two attorneys of the board of election supervisors in a fight to show that an election for charter councilmen on January 6 would be entirely legal, it was said.

Pro-charter attorneys laid plans for the battle at a meeting in the office of Attorney Thomas C. Kelley. They also pointed out that they have until December 16 to act, but will reveal their strategy much sooner than that to expedite an early decision.

With formal filing of the suit, there were immediate promises from all sides that the "emergency" litigation would be speeded through the courts in an effort to settle the question before January 6. Attorneys for both sides said they would cut legal red tape to a minimum and authoritative court sources said the suit would receive preferential treatment.

The suit contends the scheduled election would be "unconstitutional and unlawful" on the ground it conflicts with Maryland laws and the State constitution. Other points listed are:

That the five county commissioners are entitled to full four-year terms under the State constitution. The present board was elected in 1946.

That the constitution only authorizes the holding of elections for State and county officers on a quadrennial basis, which places the next "legal" election in 1950.

That the constitution legally prevents county charters from "expanding" certain powers granted them and that, hence, a provision calling for the January election is invalid.

That the scheduled election will cost county taxpayers $14,000 and expenditure of that amount on such an "unconstitutional" election would be illegal.

The suit added that "legislation passed by such usurping members of the council so unlawfully elected will be void and of no effect and will lead to great confusion in the conduct of Montgomery County and to a multiplicity of suits concerning the county's affairs."

'Semi' Shift to Fully Indigent Held Hospital Aid Solution

The District can't pay part of the hospital bills of semi-indigent patients without congressional action, but it can increase the number eligible for complete charity care as indigents.

The second point could be accomplished if the Commissioners apply a new definition to the term "indigent."

As it now stands, the District pays all hospital expenses for indigents, but expends nothing on semi-indigents, those persons who are able to pay part of their hospital bills. The latter group obtains some help in payment of their hospital bills from the Community Chest.

Commissioner Guy Mason, speaking yesterday to "clarify the situation" as it now stands, said nothing can be done for semi-indigents without an act of Congress.

The $735,000 appropriation to pay bills during the current year to nine Washington hospitals holding contracts with the District is for indigent care only, Mason said.

Payment of bills has been held up pending approval of the contracts with the hospitals (mailed out recently) and a clear definition of the term indigent. Only Children's Hospital has signed the contracts.

Mason said Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, has suggested the Commissioners define indigence on the basis in use at Gallinger Hospital since 1946 and apply the same rule to the nine contracts with private hospitals.

The rule provides that a person may qualify as an indigent in two ways. He must have less than $500 in property, exclusive of household furnishings, clothing and personal property. Or he may be declared an indigent on the basis of gross monthly income on a graduated scale.

A person now is an indigent if he makes between $100 and $135 monthly and has one dependent. The scale is graded to the point where a person is still an indigent if he earns between $300 and $520 a month but has 10 dependents.

Dr. Ruhland has suggested that the base for the person with one dependent start at $200 instead of $100, and the base for the person with 10 dependents at $520 instead of $300 to make amends for the decreasing value of the dollar.

Mason and Budget Officer Walter Fowler said the Commissioners may, if they wish, change the Gallinger scale and put it into effect for the nine hospital contracts as a definition of indigence. Mason said Ruhland's suggestion has not yet been officially considered by the Commissioners.

The District, Mason said, is limited by the Congressional Appropriation Act of 1949 to payment of the medical costs of indigents only, no matter how defined, and cannot extend aid to semi-indigents without congressional action.

Undercover pressure was believed to be developing for such an extension as a result of the row between the Hospital Service Agency and the local hospitals on pay for semi-indigent cases.

A committee of the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area has been conferring with HSA officials and those of the Community Chest on some new arrangement for semi-indigent care. This move followed the HCNCA announcement last week that it had recommended that local hospitals end their contracts with HSA and undertake to collect from their semi-indigent patients through their own accounting offices. Emergency Hospital Superintendent James G. Capossela, head of the Hospital Council committee considering the change, explained last week that the hospitals believed they could collect more money from their patients directly.

Enforcement Of Vagrancy Laws Urged

Stronger enforcement of the District's vagrancy laws was urged last night by the Federation of Civic Associations at its meeting in the Board Room of the District Building.

Harper

The association decided to ask the Commissioners to consider the vagrancy regulations with a view toward directing more vigorous enforcement to reduce the crime rate. The motion was made by Attorney Sylvester L. McLaurin, member of the legislative committee, following lengthy discussion.

Castigating the city's many idle persons, Dr. Edward F. Harris declared they "must either work or get out, and must quit hanging around pool halls and beer joints."

"Two reputable citizens were killed in the Southwest recently by Negroes—our own people," Dr. Harris emphasized. "This must be stopped."

Too Many Dismissals

Attorney Huver I. Brown contended that enforcement is not enough. He urged, in addition, uniform treatment of vagrancy cases in the courts. He declared too many cases are being dismissed by judges after police have made arrests on complaints of citizens.

Continued in office by unanimous ballot were Ernest F. Harper, postal clerk of 520 23d pl. ne., president; Mrs. Rosina C. Tucker, first vice-president; John B. Duncan, second vice president; Mrs. Edith B. Thomas, recording secretary; Mrs. Elzie W. Payton, corresponding secretary; Bernard C. Chapman, treasurer; Mrs. Martha K. Simpson, financial secretary.

Also, Mrs. Mary C. Buckner, assistant recording secretary; Lawrence L. Larry, assistant corresponding secretary; George W. Beasley, parliamentarian; Hezekiah Randolph, archivist, and the Rev. William B. Marsh, chaplain.

The group urged the Commissioners to include in their budget request from Congress funds to alleviate traffic congestion and hazards along Benning rd. ne. Specifically it sought widening of the artery between Oklahoma and Minnesota aves., including the Benning rd. bridge and railroad viaduct; construction of a bridge over the Anacostia River on either East Capitol st. or M st. extended for an alternate traffic route, and construction of an underpass at 15th and H sts.

A letter to President Truman was authorized on motion of Dr. C. E. Williams to protest against the "persecution" indulged in by the Loyalty Board "under the guise of investigation of subversive persons."

In other business, the group designated the Northeast Boundary Citizens Association to receive the annual civic award on recommendation of the civic award committee.

Falls Church

Suit to Ask Who Owns Schools

The City of Falls Church will file a "friendly suit" against Fairfax County to determine whether the county or the new city should own and operate Falls Church schools.

This was decided last night at the joint meeting in Fairfax between the county board of supervisors and the city council of Falls Church. The meeting was called to decide a course of action when it was discovered that the city and the county could find State laws saying each should own the schools.

LaRue Van Meter, Falls Church city attorney, explained that the State constitution and the general law both say cities shall own their own schools. But a special act of the General Assembly in 1942 provided that the Falls Church schools should remain under county control even though the town became a city.

Van Meter said he will ask the County Circuit Court to declare this special act unconstitutional. Defendants in the suit will be the county board of supervisors and the county school board. The county supervisors last night authorized Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh B. Marsh to defend them.

Van Meter said the city council has unofficially approved his plan of action and will probably give its official sanction Monday night.

The contradictory situation was brought to a head by the Fairfax County School Emergency Committee which is working for a $7,500,000 county school bond issue. The question arose whether Falls Church could take part in a referendum on the bond issue.

Van Meter said he believes the act of 1942 is unconstitutional, and he said it is impossible to administer it. He pointed out that State school funds are given to the city treasurer and can be distributed only by a city school board. But according to the act of 1942, he said, the Falls Church school board has no such authority.

He also observed that the special act gives the county board of supervisors authority to set the city's school tax rate. This, he said, would be taxation without representation

2 D. C. Men Are Held in Auto Deaths

Laborer Will Be Arraigned Today On Drunk Driving, Hit-Run Charges

Two District motorists were held in bond yesterday on manslaughter charges arising from two Thanksgiving Day traffic deaths.

Kim Williams, 30, of 830 3d st. sw., was put under $1000 bond by Prince Georges County police in the death of Annabelle Mitchell, 26, of 1661 Rosedale st. nw. A passenger in his car, she suffered a broken neck and died apparently instantly when the car left the road and overturned on Defense hwy. at Ardwick curve, near Lanham, Md., at 10 p.m. Thursday.

Pinned under the car, she was pronounced dead at Prince Georges Hospital. Williams suffered face cuts. He will be arraigned in Hyattsville Police Court Monday.

On a manslaughter charge in the death of a woman pedestrian, James Turner Gibson, jr., 32, a laborer, of 5001 Sheriff rd. ne., was held in $2500 bond by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, with arraignment set for December 9 to give Gibson time to engage counsel.

He will be arraigned in Municipal Court today on charges of driving while drunk and leaving after colliding. Police say his automobile, on the wrong side of the street, hit Victoria Jones, 65, of 330 McLean st. sw., as she was crossing Central ave. se. at 52d st. She died shortly afterward at Casualty Hospital.

And in Municipal Court a jury absolved George E. Brent, 22, of 2620½ Nichols ave. se., of a negligent homicide charge in connection with the traffic death of Edwin M. Jett, 79, of 1434 W st. se., in June 1947.

The prosecution attempted to prove that Brent was speeding and driving recklessly when his car struck Jett. The defense contended that heavy rain the night of the accident had caused poor visibility.

Brent still faces a charge of leaving the scene of an accident without making known his identity.

Mrs. De Hart Is Winner Of Week's Safety Award

This week's "Pedestrian of the Week" was announced yesterday as Mrs. Woodrow De Hart, 24, of 238 1st st. se., clerk in the Whelan drug store, 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

The Police Department's traffic division chose Mrs. De Hart because she walked to the end of the trolley loading platform at that intersection on her way to work—instead of stepping off in the middle of it—and looked both directions before she stepped into the street. Two persons have been killed stepping off such platforms in the last month. Mrs. De Hart will receive an automobile tire and tube, a silver loving cup and two theater tickets.

Six others receiving honorable mention and two theater tickets this week are Henry B. Riblet, 4922 N. 11th st., Arlington; Mrs. Frank Gerrity, 3011 Ontario rd nw.; William L. Faust, 812 Jefferson st. nw.; Mrs. Irene Sleeper, 2961 Carlton ave. ne.; A. W. Nielson, Cairo Hotel, and Max A. Bassin, 1349 E st. nw.

Polio Case Sends 1948 Total to 262

One additional case of poliomyelitis was reported to the District Health Department last week, bringing the total for Greater Washington so far this year to 262, as compared with 34 for the same time last year.

Latest case is that of a 32-year-old woman from Falls Church, Va., who is hospitalized at Walter Reed, Health Department officials said. So far this year, the District of Columbia has reported 132 cases of infantile paralysis, as compared with 22 for the same period of last year.

Bulletins on Knutson To Be Discontinued

Representative Harold Knutson's condition at Bethesda Naval Hospital continued so satisfactory yesterday that no further bulletins on him will be announced, the hospital said.

The Minnesota Republican underwent a gall bladder operation Wednesday. Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee who was defeated for reelection to Congress, he is expected to remain in the hospital for about three weeks.

Girl, 4, Placed in Iron Lung After Falling Out of Window

A 4-year-old Falls Church girl who fell from her mother's second-floor bedroom window just before Thanksgiving dinner, was placed in an iron lung yesterday at Arlington Hospital, when it was found that the injuries had paralyzed her breathing mechanism.

The child, Mary Margaret Proctor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence M. Proctor of 212 North Cherry st., suffered a fractured skull in the fall, injuring the portion of the brain controlling the respiratory center, according to the hospital.

Hospital Administrator John J. Anderson said the parents told him Mary had been in the bedroom about 1:30 p. m. with Mrs. Proctor who was getting ready for dinner. Mrs. Proctor was combing her hair before a mirror, Anderson reported, when she heard a noise and turned to see the window screen swinging open and her daughter gone.

Proctor, a manufacturer's representative for a frozen foods concern, was in the yard at the time of the accident. He heard the screen flap and looked up just as his daughter struck the ground.

'Busiest Day Ever,' Inspector Declares; Streetcars Held Up 10 to 30 Minutes

Jovial, eager crowds, holidaying and bent on Christmas shopping, swarmed into the downtown area yesterday, forcing police to send in reinforcements to handle traffic.

Brisk, autumny air, combined with big sales in dozens of stores, brought out Junior, Sue and in some cases, Daddy, too, and turned F st. and its environs into a criss-cross of tangled traffic and milling throngs.

Department stores, gay with holly, prancing make-believe reindeer and other Yuletide adornments, drew "tremendous" crowds.

Transit Schedules Slowed

The Capital Transit Co. called the downtown vehicle congregation "one of the heaviest . . . in the history of the city." Despite addition of 15 streetcars and 12 buses to handle the swarms of residents heading downtown, delays ranged from 10 to 30 minutes on certain lines.

"They just couldn't move, what with cruising cars and double parking," an official explained.

Traffic congestion was so marked between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m., that some police officers normally doing supervisory jobs jumped into the fray and directed cars like ordinary beatmen. Nineteen extra police were assigned to duty downtown.

Traffic Chief Uses Whistle

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, in charge of the Metropolitan Police traffic division, went to work directing traffic while on a downtown inspection tour. He said it was "busier downtown" than on any day in his long experience with Christmas shopping.

Capt. Loraine T. Johnson, of the traffic division, reported that he, too, directed traffic on several occasions while making the circuit. A part of the trouble, he said, was that the jam was upon them before they knew it was coming.

Altogether, 10 extra motorcycle policemen, five extra footmen and four beatmen from outlying areas were sent in to attempt to unsnag the traffic.

At 12:40 p. m., there were 50 people standing on the streetcar loading platform at 14th st. and New York ave. nw., waiting for an uptown streetcar. Thirty people waited at the 14th and G st. platform, heading downtown.

Cab Speed Retarded

It took a reporter 20 minutes in a cab to go from 15th and New York ave. nw. to 7th and F sts. nw. The driver said it's normally a 5 to 6-minute run.

Capital Transit inspectors stood on virtually every corner along F st.

Pvt. Paul Thorne of the traffic division, who directs traffic at 6th and F sts. nw., took a long look at the creeping streams of cars and admitted "it was never like this."

Inside the store was packed and Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager, said customers were "waiting at the doors" when they opened.

"Real Old-Time Shopping Day"

At Lansburgh's, Ralph L. Goldsmith, vice president and general manager, called yesterday the "opening gun" in the Christmas shopping season and reported "our facilities were taxed to capacity."

At Kann's, General Merchandising Manager George F. Seitz reported "there were a lot of people out—children particularly." It was "generally a very good day."

A spokesman for Woodward and Lothrop anticipated tabulations will prove the day "exceptional" both from the point of number of sales and dollar volume. "To us it looked like one of the real old-time day-after-Thanksgiving shopping days," he said.

Depositions Filed

Details of Porter's Files On Mrs. Patterson Disclosed

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

A detailed account of the life of Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson was kept by the late Charles B. Porter, former treasurer of the Washington Times-Herald and her one-time financial adviser.

This was disclosed yesterday with filing in District Court of a complete deposition from C. F. R. Ogilby, court-appointed collector for Porter's estate. Porter, cut out of the $16,586,571 Patterson will before Mrs. Patterson's death July 24, plunged to his death from a hotel window September 14.

Ogilby, questioned by attorneys for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, daughter of the late Mrs. (Cissy) Patterson who is trying to break her mother's will, revealed Porter's documents included hundreds of folders with such titles as:

"Cissy and Dupont Circle Underpass;" "Cissy and Anti-Vivisection"; "Cissy and F. D. R."; "Cissy and Her Imported Dentist"; "Cissy versus Churchill"; "Cissy & Sex—Kinsey Report"; "Cissy and Her World War II Effort"; "Cissy and Truman"; "Cissy and Her Pensioners"; "Cissy and Alcohol," a folder containing only a newspaper tear sheet; "Cissy and Bernard Baruch," etc.

One folder, said Ogilby, was entitled "$1,000,000 Check," and contained a canceled check for the amount which he said he "assumed" was signed by Mrs. Patterson. Ogilby did not disclose the recipient.

Most of the folders found in an Army locker trunk, said Ogilby, contained only tear sheets or newspaper clippings, although some contained manuscripts. He did not detail contents of the folders, although he said a folder "First Draft of Memoirs," about 30 pages in longhand, referred partly to the early life of Porter, and partly to Mrs. Patterson.

William A. Roberts, counsel for Mrs. Gizycka, who conducted the questioning in an effort to secure information for use in the court test of the Patterson will, showed he believed that the folders related to a book he said Porter was preparing.

Roberts asked:

"Was this assemblage of materials referenced elsewhere in connection with the book, and the development of the book?"

Ogilby: "The book?"

Roberts: "Yes."

Ogilby: "What book, sir?"

Roberts: "The only book that Mr. Porter wrote, and in which I am interested. . . .

Ogilby replied he saw "no indication of references or indices, or anything of that sort. . . ." He added, under questioning, that he found no fully completed manuscript of any kind. Nor, said Ogilby, did he find any early wills or wills of any kind, despite what Roberts termed as an unusual absence in the documents of a man of "such meticulous habits."

In a portion of the Ogilby deposition taken November 9, Ogilby said other documents of Porter included letters to New York publishers, although what book, if any, was involved, was not disclosed.

Reference to Pheno-Barbital

Roberts questioned Ogilby closely as to any record among Porter's documents treatment by physicians, but Ogilby said there was none. Ogilby, giving the list of folder titles, came to "Notes—Cissie and Allergies," which he said was a memorandum by Porter, referring to Mrs. Patterson.

"You would not recall whether that had any relation to phenolbarbital, would you?" asked Roberts.

"I haven't the faintest idea," replied Ogilby," . . . I can't imagine why it should have any reference to phenobarbital."

"I will loan you some of my recently read books on phenol-barbital," said Roberts, and the deposition then shows there was a "discussion off the record."

Titles of Other Chapters

Other folders, said Ogilby, were entitled, "Ellen Pearson—Mrs. George Arnold" (daughter of Drew Pearson and Mrs. Gizycka); "Cissy and Buchmanites"; "Cissy and Her Employes"; "Cissy's Gifts to Me"; "Cissy and her Pensioners"; "Cissy and Felica," which Ogilby said concerned Mrs. Gizycka's income and the return to Mrs. Patterson of a sable coat; "Cissy and her Jewels."

Other folders were entitled, "Chiggers"; "Hay Fever"; "Home Counsel and Homosexuality," which contained only a newspaper tear sheet; "Dower House"; "Psychoanalysis," which concerned personal correspondence of Porter, said Ogilby, and there was also a folder marked "Times-Herald Seven Shining Lights."

Porter originally was named as one of eight employes to receive the Times-Herald on Mrs. Patterson's death, and also was named as an executor and trustee, and inheritor of $5000.

A later codicil took him out of the will as executor and trustee and the other benefits were conditioned on being in Mrs. Patterson's employ at her death. He left her employ several months before her death.

The complete Ogilby deposition released yesterday made another vague reference apparently connected with a mysterious "riding boot all wrapped up," first mentioned in questioning on November 9. At that time Roberts asked if he found such a boot and knew what it contained. Ogilby said he found it, but did not have "the faintest idea" if it contained anything.

The full deposition shows Ogilby, on November 17, read off the title of one folder as, "J. & J. Slater," said it contained only a clipping, and added, "My recollection is that they are bootmakers."

"You say that is just a clipping in that Slater folder?" asked Roberts. "That's all," said Ogilby. "Amazing thoroughness," replied Roberts, ending that conversation in even greater mystery.

Mrs. Gizycka's challenge of the will charges it was made through fraud and coercion, and that her mother was of unsound mind.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed last night that Mrs. Gizycka was released from Presbyterian Hospital in New York Thursday, and will appear here Monday for pretrial questioning in the Patterson will contest.

Her attorney, William A. Roberts, said he telephoned Louis G. Caldwell, attorney for the will's executors, who seeks to question Mrs. Gizycka in what is expected to be a broad preview of the will fight. Roberts said he asked Caldwell if he "insists on Mrs. Gizycka's appearance Monday."

"Caldwell said he wanted her there; she's a strongly determined woman, so she will be there," said Roberts. In District Court last Monday, Roberts sought postponement of her appearance for a deposition saying she was suffering from a shortage of sugar in the blood, causing faintness and dizziness. He said she had entered a hospital on November 20, and might require an operation for a pancreatic tumor.

Roberts also said at that time that "premature questioning might embarrass the completion of her preparation of the case, but Judge James W. Morris said that argument could not be accepted as a valid reason for a postponement.

While Roberts sought a postponement to January 11, Judge Morris granted a postponement only to November 29, pending a report on Mrs. Gizycka's physical condition.

Brothers Charged In Grocery Holdup

Two brothers, who police said berated each other over the selection of a holdup victim, were charged yesterday in Municipal Court with armed robbery.

The brothers are Ernest Holley, 32, of 1003 6th st. ne., and James E. Holley, 30, of 1106 Columbia rd. nw. They were placed under $5000 bond each by Judge Thomas D. Quinn for action of the grand jury after pleading innocent.

Police said the defendants used a .38-caliber revolver in sticking up the grocery store of Mrs. Harriet H. Bregman, 32, of 1001 Lamont st. nw.

Mrs. Bregman said that when the brothers opened up the cash register they found only $4 in it. She had hidden some $15 elsewhere in the store.

One of the Hollis brothers, she said, shouted at the other: "I told you we shouldn't have come in here. I told you they have a baby and Bregman has to drive a cab."

Taste Leads to Trouble

The cold shoulder given Buck Brown at the frozen custard shop put him in hot water yesterday.

Brown, 34, residing temporarily, he said, at 1007 7th st. se., was charged in Municipal Court with threats.

Raymond S. Thomas, manager of the frozen custard works at 1003 7th st. se., said that Brown periodically asked for free custard but never received any.

Then, according to Thomas, Brown came in with a .22 rifle, and shot one bullet into the popcorn machine. The defendant also promised like treatment of Thomas himself, police said.

Judge Thomas D. Quinn placed Brown under $300 peace bond and also ordered that military authorities be notified after Brown admitted being AWOL from the Army.

Burned Boy To Undergo Skin Grafts

Michael Rector, game 4-year-old of 613 Elliott st. ne., still was holding his own last night against heavy odds—critical burns over 70 per cent of his body.

If Michael, still on the critical list at Casualty Hospital, can stick out his battle for life, doctors will prepare him Monday for a series of some dozen skin grafting operations.

Plans call for administering anesthetics Monday preparatory to removing some of the eschar, the crusty layer of dead skin. About two days later doctors will start grafting on the child skin taken from his father, who has the same type blood and Rh. factor.

Grafting one person's skin on another is only a temporary measure, the child's doctor said, because it does not take permanently. It stays on an average of 70 days, experience has shown.

Before the skin grafted on the youngster disappears, the doctor hopes, scar tissue will form in the middle and healing will start from the sides of the burned area.

Later, some of the limited amount of unburned skin on Michael—he was burned from chest to ankles—may be grafted on parts of the burned areas.

Meanwhile, plaster casts have been applied on the back of his knees to keep the knee joints in an extended position. This was done to forestall contracture of the knee joints.

Fortunately, Michael has been experiencing but little pain recently, his doctor reported. He has been receiving a high protein diet, sugar and salt, as well as protein solutions injected intravenously.

Blood transfusions have been administered every other day. He has been receiving large doses of penicillin to try to prevent infection, no evidence of which yet has been noted, the doctor said.

Michael, whose clothes were set aflame by a match-started fire, two weeks ago, has surprised doctors with his tenacious grasp on life.

Raise in Express Rates Proposed

If approved by the commission, this would increase the charges on a sliding scale ranging from 6 cents to 99 cents a 100 pounds.

The examiner, Leonard Way, said these increases would give the Railway Express Agency $6,847,000 more revenue a year. He said that still would not wipe out the operating deficits which the agency has been reporting in recent years.

Tailor Your Daily Diet For Greater Will Power

By Ida Jean Kain

LOPSIDED diets definitely defeat their own purpose. Since they fall far short of providing good nutrition, the dieter's physical resistance weakens and will-power wilts.

Perhaps you know how it is . . . after three days on flimsy fare you feel terrible, and quite sensibly decide it would be better to be a trifle overweight than to feel weak and dispirited. And so back to your regular habits of eating, which unfortunately have proved fattening.

IDA JEAN KAIN

You've tried dieting to reduce and it doesn't agree. Why not try eating to lose weight? On the protection pattern of eating, with calories cut to size, you'll feel better and better as the excess pounds are turned back into energy. And as for will-power, that can be developed. Scientific eating strengthens it.

Try it . . . eat to reduce for just one week. For the first three days you'll perhaps feel a mite hungry, but you will not feel weak. And by the fifth day you will be strong for this new way of eating. Stay with the protective diet for seven days, and you can get down to normal weight . . . not in that brief time, of course, but by then a couple of pounds will be off, appetite will be under control and you'll feel fine . . . just fine. But wait—let someone else tell about her success . . .

"I WANT to report I stayed on the waist-whittling diet until I lost 32 pounds. This is the first diet I ever could stay on. Why didn't somebody tip me off before that eating can actually be reducing! After the first few days I really didn't feel hungry, and I feel better now than I have in years. Please tell your overweights it can be done. It's protective eating for me from now on. My friends all say I look years younger."

That's the beauty of reducing on scientific menus . . . the protective foods provide the essential nutrients that extend the prime of life. The scientific diet is made up of protective foods, and they help you to stay young.

Check to see that you have daily: a pint of buttermilk or skim milk, one or two eggs, a liberal serving of broiled or baked lean meat, fish or chicken, to provide protein and put backbone in will-power. Have three thin slices of whole-grain bread or a potato and one slice; have a dark green leafy vegetable every day and another cooked vegetable, also a raw vegetable or salad; and two or three fruits. Drink six to eight glasses of water a day between meals.

If you wish the Waist Whittling Diet, please send long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ida Jean Kain, The Washington Post, 1337-43 E st. nw., Washington 4, D. C.

New York, Pennsylvania Groups to Hold Dances

By Nicha Soure

IF THE populations of New York and Pennsylvania are an indication of the number of former residents who will attend their dances next weekend, there should be a bang-up crowd at the Shoreham Hotel.

The Pennsylvanians will celebrate on Friday night in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham. Former residents of Harrisburg will be the guests of honor at this regular monthly dance. Dave McWilliams' Orchestra will play for the dance which will start at 10 p. m.

The Paul Jones, that popular method of changing partners, will again be featured during the evening's fun as well as the familiar and well-liked waltzes.

Mrs. Ray J. Whitney is the chairman for the affair. Assisting her in the arrangements are Senator Francis J. Myers, Mrs. Elizabeth Sloan, Raymond C. Smith, Thomas Davis, Mrs. Algia A. Martin and Mrs. Ester Riley.

For further information about the dance, call Mrs. Whitney at Glebe 2629 or Mrs. Martin at Jackson 2586-J.

ON Saturday night, December 4, New Yorkers will celebrate Columbia Night ball. The Columbia University will be the special guests and their colors and music will be featured.

The ball will be in the Shoreham Hotel to the music of McWilliams Orchestra. Enlisted servicemen in uniform will be admitted free, and formal dress is requested but not required.

A cordial invitation is extended by Harold B. Barnett, president of the society, and his fellow officers to all New Yorkers and their friends from other States to attend the dance which starts at 10 p. m.

For further information, call Miss Dorothy M. Gollinger, secretary, at Kenmore 5004 during the evenings.

MONTANA STATE Society will have a treat at their dance on Saturday, December 4, in the form of Miss Montana of 1948. The winner of the State's beauty contest, Miss Patti Luer, will be the guest of honor at the pre-holiday dance in the Louis Seize Room of the Shoreham Hotel.

The dance will be from 9 p. m. till 1 a. m. with Dave McWilliams Orchestra supplying the music. Formal dress is optional according to Lawrence Scheewe, president of the society.

Miss Luer, one of the first 15 finalists at the Atlantic City contest, is a student at the University of Montana, in Missoula, where she recently played the feminine lead in the university production of "Life With Father." She is presently en route to New York City, where she will participate in a movie production covering the story of the selection of Miss America.

THAT important organization, the Conference of State Society Officers, will hold its second quarterly dinner meeting on Monday, November 29, at 6:30 p. m. in the Grace Dodge Hotel.

The Conference is an organization open to officers of State societies whose activities are strictly bipartisan. The Conference includes the coordination of events of the various societies, quarterly dinner meetings, and group discussions for the exchange of ideas for the betterment of State societies.

Officers of the Conference for 1948-1949 are Carl M. Walker, South Dakota, chairman; Col. Thomas N. Tappy, Florida, vice chairman; Ray W. Nedrow, Nebraska, vice chairman; Charles H. Helsper, Kansas, secretary; W. J. Fleming, New Jersey, treasurer.

The Kansas Society of Washington will hold a farewell buffet-dinner for Senator Arthur Capper at the Mayflower Hotel on December 14, according to Charles H. Helsper, secretary of the society.

Amar Ketchum, president, will pay a tribute to the elder Kansas statesman who is retiring from the Senate at the end of this term. It is expected that a large group of the 2000 estimated Kansans in Washington will be present to bid farewell to the Senator.

Don't forget the North Carolina dance tonight. It will be in the Shoreham Hotel with music furnished by Dave McWilliams Orchestra. This Tarheel post-Thanksgiving dance will begin at 9:45 p. m. and last till 1 p. m.

December 20 might seem a long way in the future but it isn't too early to start dreaming up a Paul Bunyan story. The tall tales contest is open to members of the Minnesota State Society, their families and friends in Greater Washington.

Contestants are asked to create a Paul Bunyan tale, the taller the better. Everyone knows that Paul Bunyan, legendary superman and woodsman, hero and patron saint among the loggers of the early Northwest, was the mightiest man who ever lived. No feat of strength or courage was beyond his power, no obstacle ever stopped his work or logging off the Great Northwest.

Only in this contest Paul Bunyan is not limited to the Northwest. You can have Paul Bunyan solve all international problems, you can make a statesman out of him, put him in the White House, on Capitol Hill or out on Embassy row. Place him anywhere for a story and let your imagination run wild.

There will be more about the contest later but for the time being, start thinking.

President Truman's home State will celebrate with a dance in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel tonight at 9:30.

The guests will be received by the president of the society, Thomas T. Kenney, assisted by Mrs. Craig L. Reddish, Mrs. Eric Jansson, Mrs. Max Foster, Miss Eva Jane Lewis and Mrs. Claude M. Houchins.

A musical program will be featured under the direction of W. Arthur McCoy, assisted by Mrs. Clarence McCune.

It will be a Christmas party for the Georgia State Society when they meet on Saturday, December 4, in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

Group singing, with Christmas Carols in the limelight, will be under the direction of Mrs. Clark Tate from 9 p. m. until 10 p. m. Dancing will begin at 10 p. m.

Serving on the reception committee will be Mrs. E. B. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Tate, Maj. and Mrs. R. C. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Geeslin, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Mitchell, Col. and Mrs. S. Gordon Green, the Misses Winona Thurston, Clarissa Wright, Lillian Coogle, Joyce DeJournette and Sam Rolls and Maj. Henry Langley.

For further information call Mrs. J. W. Thurston at Randolph 6833.

Make Him Want to Obey

Child's Urge to Please Stronger Than Fear of Harsh Punishment

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

PARENTS DEMAND of their children a high degree of compliance to their wishes. They want children who are good, who obey when spoken to, who develop those virtues which society calls desirable.

The stern parent relies upon punishment as a means of bringing about this result. She argues that if misbehavior is made disagreeable enough to the child, he won't repeat it. It is amazing that she continues this, even when she discovers that despite punishment the child misbehaves again.

The strongest influence acting upon the child is the desire to do things that bring him pleasure. What this conduct is may not be wrong from any standpoint but the parents.

We think first of physical activity, an absolute must from the child's standpoint. Yet activities of all kinds may degenerate into mischief. The busy child gets into things and is apt to destroy something valuable. The mother feels that he deserves punishment so that this won't happen again. But activity is so essential to the child that he goes on being active, even if he has to suffer for it.

A parent should realize that during this period children must learn the hundred and one ways of acting which mark a civilized person. This requires an inhibition of the child's own natural pleasure desires. The most powerful influence for good during this period is the child's desire for the parents' love and approval.

Likes to Be on Good Terms

THE spirit which makes a child WANT to do what the parents want him to, even if this prevents him acting in a way to give himself pleasure, is inspired by his strong desire to be on good terms with those who love and cherish him.

The punished child feels antagonism toward the punisher. He loses his desire (if this happens often enough) to please her. He continues to cater to his own desires, even if they bring more punishment.

But, love and devotion in guiding a child toward right ways of acting are the strongest weapons the parent possesses. It must be, in order to woo the child from doing as he pleases in favor of doing what the parent thinks is best for him and best for all concerned.

How to Dull Polished Pewter

I have an antique pewter plate which, by error, has been polished to a bright finish. I would appreciate it if you would advise me what can be done to have the plate restored to a dull finish. H. A. B.

You can restore pewter to a dull finish yourself by rubbing it with very fine steel wool. Or, it can be done professionally by a metal refinisher who applies a dulling compound and then buffs it on a lathe. One firm which does this work can be reached by calling Metropolitan 1134.

I have a very small study, the walls of which are painted in a light shade of green. Two walls are lined with bookshelves painted white. Under part of the bookshelves is an oak bookcase with glass. The most prominent feature is a mahogany desk and chair. I bought a rather large filing cabinet painted olive drab from Army surplus. There is a typewriter chair, also olive drab, and an unpainted magazine rack which I made out of orange crates. I would like to paint the filing cabinet which is badly chipped, and the magazine stand. Shall I also paint the oak bookcase? What colors would you suggest? There is a Persian rug which would blend with all colors and I could get new curtains. G. W. S.

Because the room is small and there are quite a few pieces of furniture in it, I would suggest you not introduce any color, but use a mahogany varnish stain on the filing cabinet and typewriter chair so they would match the desk. Then the magazine rack could be painted white. The mahogany stain would have been good on it also, but since the rack is made of orange crates you need to use a paint which would cover the grain. I would suggest you paint the oak bookcase white to match the other bookcases in the room.

How do you make pink lemonade with grenadine in it? J. E. W.

I have not been able to find a recipe giving the specific amounts of grenadine to add when making lemonade. However, since grenadine is a sweet, red syrup, it seems you could add enough to the lemon juice and water to give the color you wish and then add sugar to taste. If you add the sugar first, the syrup may make it too sweet.

I crochet a great deal and do a lot of embroidery, all on orders. I have established quite a nice clientele. However, my orders exceed my "two-hand" capacity and I find I need help if I am to satisfy my customers. I would like someone who could match my work and crochet the motifs only. I furnish all material and do all assembling. I pay for each motif regardless of pattern. J. H. J.

Any interested readers may contact J. H. J., at ADams 5145.

I would like to have your idea on draperies for a living room about 14 by 16 feet with ceilings about 10 feet high. I have an Oriental rug on the floor. Would you suggest a plain color, striped, or floral design? Which of the three would be appropriate? D. A. H.

With the Oriental rug, I believe plain draperies would be the most pleasing.

I have a coffee table which consists of a wooden luggage rack as a stand and a wooden tray for the top. This tray is an entirely separate piece and moves about when someone accidentally bumps into it. I wondered whether you could suggest where I might purchase small suction cups (which have suction on both sides) to hold the tray to the luggage rack. R. J. R.

A check with furniture and houseware departments fails to find the kind of suction cups you wish. Could any of our readers help R. J. R.?

I have some beautiful china service plates, flowered center and wide gold band. As mine is a maidless household, can these plates be used for a buffet supper or, occasionally, as a luncheon plate for bridge, etc.? D. E.

I think these plates would be very attractive used as you suggest.

Can you tell me where I can buy wheels to replace the broken ones (5-inch) on my child's doll carriage? J. M. M.

I have found a cycle shop which has 5-inch disk wheels. For further information about them, call the store at MIchigan 0100.

What cleaning agents and/or polishes should I use on (a) a brass bowl and plate of Chinese origin, (b) a very old pewter porringer, and (c) copper teapot and tray. All are badly stained and tarnished—water, cigarette marks, oxidation, chemicals. Also, is there one lacquer which may be applied to any or all these metals to retard tarnish, or does each metal require a different treatment? E. J. A.

(a) Use a good metal polish or polishing cloth on the brass. These products can be purchased where household supplies are sold in department and hardware stores.

(b) Clean the pewter by rubbing with the very finest (00 grade) steel wool you can buy.

(c) A clear brushing lacquer, available at most well stocked paint stores, can be used on all pieces. However, before it is applied it is most important that all traces of oil be removed from the polished surface. To do this, the last polishing before lacquering should be done with gloves on to prevent the bare fingers from touching the piece and, of course, the lacquering will be done with gloves on. For best results, the metal pieces should be not less than 70 degrees in temperature when lacquered. (Lacquer should not be used on ash trays, where cigarettes will be pressed out against it.)

Sometimes, heavy burned-on deposits can be loosened by placing the dry pan over a burner. As the pan heats, it will expand enough to loosen the deposit. Stay right with the pan for it takes only a minute if the treatment works. When the large pieces have been loosened, remove the pan from the heat, allow to cool, and scour away the remaining discoloration with steel wool and cleansing powder.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Fix It Together

"Daddy, will you fix my doll's eyes? They won't open." "This wheel came off my truck and I can't put it back on. Do you think you can fix it?" Many a father is met by such questions as he comes home at night. Often the answer the youngster gets is something like this, "I'll see what I can do tonight after you go to bed."

There's no reason why this isn't a perfectly satisfactory answer to most children. Yet one father realized that the after-bed repairs he made might well be of real interest and value to the children. They often asked, "How did you do it, daddy?" or "I wish I could fix things like you do!" Now he explains to Jane or Donnie what he is doing and uses their help. This plan won't always fit into the family schedule, but if there is time before or after dinner to get the simple repair job done, it will be both pleasurable and profitable to have the youngsters in on it.

BACKSTAGE WITH EISENHOWER AS THE YANKS CRASHED ACROSS REMAGEN BRIDGE!

How did General Bradley break the news to Ike of the unexpected gateway over the Rhine? Why did British Field Marshal Brooke argue with Eisenhower over the Rhine strategy? And what was the only time of the war the General donned a steel helmet? Don't miss tomorrow's exciting installment of "Crusade in Europe," Eisenhower's own story of World War II.

HOW BIG A REPAIR JOB FOR D. C. SCHOOLS?

The District Board of Education wanted $50,000,000 to spend on improving Washington schools over the next five years. The Board of Trade said only $12,500,000 could be used. So Dr. George Strayer of Columbia University was called in to decide which school buildings should be repaired, torn down and remodeled—and what the cost would be. His 161-page report is summarized (with pictures) tomorrow in Section II.

Brilliant Reception

Army, Navy Chiefs, Wives Honored by Ludlow Kings

By Marie McNair

THE Army and Navy presented itself in full strength yesterday at the cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Ludlow King in honor of the Chief of Staff and Mrs. Omar Bradley and the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Louis Denfeld. Mr. King, who served with distinction throughout the war, now has a very special job with the service which has to do with construction and planning, and the party yesterday was to honor these two branches under the happiest sort of circumstance.

Mr. King's mother, Lady Lewis, and Sir Willmott Lewis, turned over their Prospect ave. house in Georgetown for the occasion, a handsome high-ceilinged, spacious residence, decorated under the skillful eye and hand of its owner.

POLISHED paneling, wide hallways, broad stairs give the house an earlier era charm. In the drawing room, where Mr. and Mrs. King stood with their honor guests, there are delicate blue brocade hangings at long windows, and off-white walls. In the library lined with book shelves from floor to ceiling there's an almost speaking portrait of Lady Lewis' son, Lieut. Charles King, who lost his life in the war. And in the dining room, where there were hams and turkeys on the buffet, the windows are bordered in heavy draperies in rich crimson tone.

ARMY KHAKI and Navy blue failed as foils to the smart costumes of hostess and honor guests. Mrs. King's jacquard satin gown looked like any other "little black dress" until you caught the cut of the skirt which developed a fullness at the knees and was caught with a twist at the side. Mrs. Denfeld wore battleship gray, the skirt made with single tier, and Mrs. Bradley—forced to sit much of the time because of a back ailment—had also chosen gray, in a paler tone. All three wore flowers—Mrs. King a brace of gardenias, and the most beautiful purple orchids were pinned on the shoulders of Mrs. Bradley and Mrs. King.

I saw Major Gen. and Mrs. Willard Holbrook, the latter in a stiff black taffeta frock; Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer and Mrs. Wedemeyer, wearing hunters green; Gen. A. C. McAuliffe, but not Mrs. McAuliffe, and Gen William D. Connor without Mrs. Connor.

GEN. LAURIS NORSTED'S good-looking wife was there with her husband, wearing a block frock and a toreador hat of winter white felt with black pompons on either side.

And another Mr. and Mrs. were the Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitneys. Mrs. Whitney, all in black with a glycerined ostrich feather soaring from her hat.

The Hon. Angus McDonnell, who was with the British Embassy during the war years, was having a great time renewing old friendships, stopping to chat with Mrs. Marcella Dupont, who's in town for only a day or two and is stopping at the Mayflower.

With Mrs. George Holmes was Mrs. Hope Aspell of Philadelphia, who is her guest for a brief visit after the two spent Thanksgiving with Mrs. Edwin Watson at her country home at Carlottesville, Va.

MR. AND MRS. Jones Yorke—she's Mrs. Kenneth Royall's sister—were there from their home in North Carolina, and headed for the Army and Navy game in Philadelphia today. With them are Mr. and Mrs. Watts Carr, who are also to be guests of the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Royall for the game.

Saw Representative and Mrs. Mike Monroney, just back after the hot Oklahoma campaign, Mrs. Monroney wearing a new marten stole around her shoulders which she said she bought when dock strikes prevented them from taking a South American cruise.

Then there were Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss Coonley, Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Mrs. Joseph Davies in gray wool with a hat fashioned of tiny curled ostrich tips in various shades of gray; Lewis Cotlow, Gen. and Mrs. Stuart Bragdon, Harold Hinton, Assistant to Secretary of Defense Forrestal, with Mrs. Hinton; Capt. and Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Helen, wearing a gay red hat; Gen. Burdette Fitch, and Mrs. Fitch in a hat shielded her beaux yeux, with dripping black ostrich. And from next door, former United States Minister to Sweden Frederick Sterling and Mrs. Sterling, who stopped in on their way to dinner.

Others who entertained before the dance were Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Fales, Col. and Mrs. Pierpont M. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Gearhart Ghesell, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. Middleton Train, and Col. and Mrs. Alden Sibley.

For her party Mrs. McGhee wore a peach-colored satin gown made of the Eduardian period with strapless bodice and a skirt which fell to fullness at the hem.

Five Hadassah Officers Greeted By Miss Truman at Blair House

Miss Margaret Truman received five officers of Junior Hadassah yesterday afternoon at Blair House. This group, representing the Young Women's Zionist Organization of America, are attending the three-day twenty-fifth annual convention which will end tonight at the Statler Hotel.

As a token of esteem and admiration of the Jewish women of America and the children of Israel, Miss Truman was presented a beige blouse embroidered in blue and gold Yemenite embroidery. The blouse, made by children of Meier Shfeyah, was brought from Israel by Miss Sarah Nieman, the national Junior Hadassah vice president who spent a year in the infant state.

The five officers who were received at Blair House were Miss Zelda Funk, national president; Miss Ralene Levy, national vice president and convention cochairman; Miss Sarah Nieman, national vice president; Miss Pearl Greenberg, convention cochairman; and Miss Dorothy Deskin, president of the local chapter of Junior Hadassah.

During the morning session yesterday, the delegates were broken up in six groups discussing simultaneously the role of fund-raising. The delegates were faced with the problem of raising more funds for the project in Israel to meet the needs of the thousands that will be going into Israel in the next year.

The treasurer's report was heard during the business meeting yesterday afternoon. Miss Elaine Baskowitz Glenn reported that $183,000 was raised by Junior Hadassah during the year. Of this sum, $125,000 will go to the children's village of Meier Shfeyah, $5,000 to the citrus farm of Tardess Anna, $4,400 to the Henrietta Szold School of Nursing, $15,000 to the Youth Aliyah, the immigration of youth to Israel, and $33,000 will go to the Jewish National Fund.

Professor Eliezer Rieger, chairman of the department of education of Hebrew University in Jerusalem, spoke at the Sabbath Dinner of Junior Hadassah on the impact of the state of Israel on American Jewry.

He said that Jewish society has been drifting aimlessly in this country for many years. The tremendous impact of the State of Israel will be felt in America since it will give the Jewish people an aim and driving power which are the greatest assets any people can have, he said.

Professor Rieger declared that Jewishness could be preserved on three different levels. The first, he said, was through intensifying the Zionist life experiences. He mentioned that this could be done by American Jews making a pilgrimage to Palestine, and possibly every Junior Hadassah member undergoing a year of service in Palestine.

The second level, according to Professor Rieger, is knowing and understanding of the Hebrew culture. He said that by finding out about a culture outside of a person's native one, he can intellectually know his own better. The women who are skilled, as the professor expects American Jews not only to be consumers but producers of Hebrew culture.

The last level was the settling of Palestine, Professor Rieger said. Israel needs not only the displaced people of Europe but also men and American Jews are, to build up the infant state, he concluded.

THE SAINT

IT WAS JUST A CRAZY IMPULSE, SAINT. AFTER I SAW YOU--YOU LOOKED AS IF YOU COULD BE A ROBIN HOOD--AND YOU MIGHT DO SOMETHING FOR A DAMSEL IN DISTRESS.
I'VE MADE A CAREER OF IT, LIZA. BUT IF ALL THIS IS DISTRESS, I WONDER WHAT DISASTER LOOKS LIKE?
DO YOU THINK A GIRL SHOULD BE HAPPY--EVEN WITH ALL THIS--IF SHE DIDN'T KNOW WHO SHE REALLY WAS OR WHERE IT ALL CAME FROM?
YOU MEAN YOU JUST WOKE UP THE OTHER DAY AND HERE YOU WERE?
NO--I'VE ALWAYS HAD THINGS LIKE THIS--THROUGH DAN PEARSON. HE'S AN ATTORNEY WHO USED TO BE MY GUARDIAN. I HAVE ONLY TO ASK HIM FOR ANYTHING I WANT.

Navy Could Upset Dope and Win in a 'Gallup'

John Gallagher of the Manchester Arms reports that Edith Hulley of his office spotted this sign in Annapolis the other day: "Dr. Gallup Picked Army."

The betting men will give you Navy and 21 points. What'll Gallup give—Navy and 4 per cent?

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Traffic lights at the New Jersey ave. and 1st st. nw. corners of Constitution ave. seem to be poorly timed.

The light at 1st st. releases eastbound traffic just in time for it to reach the New Jersey ave. intersection as the light there is also releasing southeastbound traffic into Constitution ave.

Proper timing would avoid this conflict.

George A. Reynolds
2220 Bryan pl. se.

Dear George:

These lights are under the jurisdiction of the Architect of the Capitol, David Lynn.

He told me that they were set about a year or two ago, following a survey made by the traffic director's office.

However Traffic Director Keneipp seemed surprised to hear this news, and promised that he'd look into the matter right away. So it may very well be that your suggestion will lead to some improvement.

Bill

MISCELLANY

Mary Clement Rogers of 4 Clermont pl., Garrett Park, Md., is looking for an old-fashioned bathing suit, complete with puffed sleeves. She wants to wear it to a masquerade, but so far—no luck . . . The Cage Bird Society and the Penn-Jersey Bird Club are sponsoring a bird exhibition at Odd Fellows Temple, today and tomorrow. Trophies will be presented to winners Sunday at 5 p. m. by radio's Mike Hunnicutt, who would easily win the honors in the cuckoo class, except that he's barred for being a professional . . . The approach of the Christmas season brings a timely reminder from Irene D. Howard of 1204 S. Alfred st., Alexandria, Va.: "Poinsettia" has four syllables, not three and the final "I" shouldn't be slighted, either in spelling or pronunciation . . . Frank F. Turner, jr., of 1200 U st. nw., carpentry instructor for Police Boy's Club No. 2, tells me that he and his boys need some more old or broken toys which they can repair and give to needy children . . . Mrs. J. Susnow of 2502 14th st. ne. has another election story. A 6-year-old neighbor lad came over the other day to report that his class in school had held a mock election. When asked about the outcome, he piped: "Truman beat Gooey" . . . J. J. Cunningham of 654 Franklin st. ne. wonders why the Army took 'em so young in the first war. He submits a clipping which refers to " . . . 28-year-old Alvin Heaps, a World War I veteran."

VAGRANT THOUGHT

MISTER, BEWARE!

The other day we ran a "Lady, Beware" jingle which warned women to be suspicious of husbands who comment about their hats.

Comes now an answering message from T. D. Tidibo, which runs like this:

If wifey should favorably mention
A snake 'round your neck
Would hardly attract her attention.

W. O. Long of 2402 Mount Vernon ave., Alexandria, Va., reports that the Palm Theater recently bore the marquee legend:

"Mother Wore Tights in Technicolor."

HEAR YE, HEAR YE!

At periodic intervals it becomes necessary to repeat the ground rules under which this department operates. Old readers forget, and new readers must be "indoctrinated."

All communications should be signed. If there's a good reason for not printing your name or address, I'll respect your request for anonymity.

There is no charge for Give-Aways, but they must be bona-fide (no money changing hands, even for a charitable cause) and must be submitted by mail—not telephone.

I try to find room to mention meetings of worthwhile organizations, but I can't help you much at the last minute. Publicity chairmen should send me their copy well in advance of the date of the event to be publicized. There isn't enough space to go around, so we must allocate it in the order in which requests are received.

I know I'm seldom at my telephone, because I've got to circulate. But there's no need to call me a dozen times; just leave your name and number with our efficient Washington Post operators, and I'll call you back.

I can't acknowledge all my mail, but I do try to answer those letters which require answers. However, I've never been on a current basis since I started this column, and if I ever do get caught up, I'll suspect that the output has turned stale, and nobody reads it any more.

TESTIMONIAL

It's about the scatterbrained female who asks the bank teller to cash a check for her. Handing back the check, and a pen, the teller says: "May we have your indorsement on the back, please?"

Stumped for a moment, the lady finally takes pen in hand and laboriously writes:

"I heartily indorse the First National Bank. Tillie Smith."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Attorney General Clark tells about the pilot of a B-29 who sent a message to the airport's control tower: "I'm coming in with 3 bags of mail and 1000 little men," . . . "Repeat, please," said the man in the control tower. The pilot repeated that he was coming in with 3 bags of mail and 1000 little men . . . The orders went out to clear the field and have ambulances ready for a crash landing by a drunken pilot. The B-29 came in and the pilot made a perfect landing, and out came the mail and 1000 little men. "Who are these little men?" asked the astonished airport officials . . . "They're just Texans," explained the pilot, Texans with the ego squeezed out of 'em."

Ben Grauer of NBC, was conducting a program of broadcasts from European capitals. While the Paris commentator was on the air, Grauer studied the script on his desk. He was wearing earphones, so that he'd know when to start speaking. He heard, over the earphones, the message "Look up, Ben." He looked up and saw the program director, in the glass-inclosed booth, holding up a sign: "Don't switch to Rome. Switch to London." Grauer altered the script, and introduced Fred Bate from London . . . The Rome line was dead. The director had tried to tell this to Grauer, but couldn't attract his attention because the glass-inclosed booth was soundproof. The director therefore had used the shortwave circuit to London to have Fred Bate there tell Grauer to look up.

When Moss Hart's "Light Up The Sky" opened at the Locust Theater in Philadelphia, an employe complained to Coproducer Bernard Hart about the show's sign in the ticket-office next door. The sign listed Virginia Field, Glenn Anders and Audrey Christie as the stars. "There's no mention of Sam Levene, who really is the star," Coproducer Hart was told. He shrugged: "Aw, who cares about an actor's billing." Then he walked by the window, and noticed that the sign began "Joseph Hyman Presents," without mentioning Coproducer Hart—who then rushed into the office and threatened that the broker would get no tickets unless the sign was withdrawn.

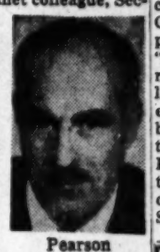
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Marshall Blasts Big Arms Budget

By Drew Pearson

The text will never be published, but Secretary of State Marshall has written a stinging private letter to his Cabinet colleague, Secretary of Defense Forrestal, of great interest to every taxpayer.



Pearson

Marshall and Forrestal agree on many things, usually are to be found side by side during inner Cabinet debates.

But on the question of a huge war budget, Marshall has put himself vigorously on record against Forrestal's proposed war expenditures.

In his letter, the Secretary of State described Forrestal's demand of a 24 billion-dollar expenditure as basically dishonest since it presupposes the imminence of war. And the international situation, Marshall said, did not require the United States to go on a war footing.

Marshall also complained that the Secretary of Defense was ignoring good taste and good judgment by proposing a war budget at the same time the Secretary of State was trying to iron out the peace problems of the world.

Finally, Marshall said that if the budget was reduced from 24 billions to 15 billions, he would support it.

Handing Hitler His Hat

Here's a bit of backstage repartee at the Palace de Chaillot in Paris indicating how the French feel about the United States-British plan to hand Ruhr industry back to the German cartels.

Passing British U. N. Delegate Hector McNeil in the corridors of the Palace, French Journalist Pertinax stopped him to say:

"You British are making the same old mistake of saying the Germans are gentlemen, after all. You're making the same mistake Chamberlain made in 1938 when he came away from a visit with Hitler exclaiming: 'He's a perfect gentlemen; he helped me on with my overcoat.'"

With thick Scotch accent, McNeil replied: "It may have been Hitler who helped Chamberlain with his overcoat, but don't forget it was the British people who handed him his hat."

Note—What the French don't want is to have the Ruhr—key to European peace or war—reach the hat-handing stage.

Truman's Real Friends

Two men who fought hardest against President Truman's renomination at Philadelphia were Senator Claude Pepper of Florida and Col. Jake Arvey, head of the Democratic machine in Chicago. Once the decision was made, however, no two men worked harder to elect Truman.

In Florida, Pepper was largely responsible for routing the Dixiecrats and holding Florida in line. Because he had previously known Henry Wallace, he was also effective in cutting down the Wallaceites. Traveling 13,000 miles, he spoke in California, Illinois and West Virginia for Truman.

Newspaper polls indicated Dewey would carry Florida—and no other Florida Congressman or Senator dared get out and work for the national ticket. But Pepper did and helped bring about a landslide.

In Illinois, the dopesters whispered that Jake Arvey would make a deal with down-State Republicans to save his Democratic machine in Chicago. Just the opposite happended. Though he had opposed Truman's nomination, Arvey worked harder on this campaign than any other, gave Truman the biggest parade and reception he received anywhere.

Champion Name-Caller

Whenever Congressman Cliff Clevenger, the GOP gentleman from Bryan, Ohio, opens his mouth he puts his foot in it. After calling President Truman the "Missouri jackass," Clevenger has added to his list by branding General Eisenhower a traitor.

Speaking at Van Wert, Ohio, Clevenger said, "The acts of these men who let the Russians into those capitals over there, exposing us to this constant danger of war, make Benedict Arnold look like a pale shadow of a traitor to America."

Eisenhower states it was he who decided the Russian army rather than American troops should take Berlin.

Merry-Go-Round

Just before he left for Europe, Secretary of Defense Forrestal called a series of conferences on defense, hastily sent a special airplane for Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles. But the day Bowron arrived in Washington, Forrestal left for Europe, leaving the mayor twiddling his thumbs at the Statler Hotel . . . Congratulations to the Wilmington (N. C.) Chamber of Commerce for bringing the victims of the Donora, Pa., smog to North Carolina sunshine. When the Civil Aeronautics Board refused to let Capital Airlines carry the victims free, the North Carolina folk even paid their transportation. 'This is what's called "Good-Will-mington.")' . . . There's no love lost between certain GOP leaders in Massachusetts—notably earthy Speaker Joe Martin and bluestocking Senator Leverett Saltonstall. Joe wants to terminate Beacon Hill aristocracy's rule of the Republican roost in Massachusetts . . . Undersecretary of State Lovett has been maneuvering backstage to get his former banking boss, Averell Harriman, made Secretary of State. Lovett also thinks it would be just wonderful if John Foster Dulles, Dewey's pal, were appointed Undersecretary . . . A Los Angeles family that planned to vote for Dewey paid $55 rent for an apartment, but was continually goaded by the landlord about what was going to happen when Dewey was elected. The rent would then be $100. So the whole family finally voted for Truman. That's what the real estate boys did to Dewey in a lot of places.
